H. H. THE NIZAM'S GUARANTEED STATE RAILWAY Co., LD.

ADVERTISING AT RAILWAY STATIONS.

THE PROPRIETOR of the Bombay Gazette Press, having leased from the NIZAM'S STATE RAILWAY COMPANY the exclusive right of advertising at all the Railway Stations belonging to the Company, is prepared to contract with parties desirous of posting notices or advertisements on the lines.
The Cantonment of SECUNDERABAD, as is well known, contains the largest military garrison in India—a garrison comprising over 5,000 British and native troops. Contiguous to it is the Cantonment of BOLARUM, garrisoned by two regiments and one battery of the Hyderabad Contingent, all officered by Europeans. South of Secunderabad, about 4 miles are the suburbs of Hyderabad, containing the Nizam's regular troops, about 5,000 in number, officered mostly by Europeans—besides a large civil population. It would manifestly be advantageous to firms to advertise at the stations on the above railway, the most important of which are SECUNDERABAD, HYDERABAD, GANGAWARUM, and TANDUR.
Announcements may be in English or in any of the NATIVE LANGUAGES.
INSURANCE COMPANIES, SHIPPING COMPANIES, HOTEL-KEEPERS, MERCHANTS, TRADERS, and others who wish to force their business on the notice of the public, all alike value the privilege of Railway Station Advertising.
There is no reason why the privilege should not be also specially valuable to Advertisers in India looking to the great and increasing number of Native Railway Passengers on the two trunk lines on Western India. Native Merchants, Traders, &c., seeing that they have the privilege of advertising in their own language, would find the publication of their announcements at Railway Stations an infallible means of extending their business.
Advertisers can select the Station at which they wish their Placards posted, and may advertise for any period that may be agreed on. The charges have been fixed on an extremely moderate scale to encourage Advertisers to make a liberal use of the new means now offered of making announcements known to the public.
Placards, according to the taste of Advertisers may be printed at moderate charge in ENGLISH or any of the NATIVE LANGUAGES at the Bombay Gazette Press. Estimates on application.

RATES.

Board not exceeding 2 feet long and 2 feet broad Rs. 1 per month. For every additional square foot Annas 2.
Thus a firm exhibiting a board, say 4 square feet, will have the advantage of having their business advertisement read by thousands of Passengers on one station platform for the trifling monthly expenditure of Rs. 4. Parties advertising on six Stations or more will be allowed a discount of ten per cent. twelve Stations or more, twenty-ve per cent.
The boards to be delivered at the Bombay Gazette Office, whence they will be sent by the Lessee to the various Stations selected by the Advertiser. In the event of the contract terminating, the boards will be brought back to Bombay at the expense and risk of the Advertiser.
Special arrangements for long periods.
For further particulars apply to the Manager of the "Bombay Gazette" Office, Esplanade Road, Fort.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE,

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

ADVICE TO INVALIDS.—If you wish to obtain quiet, refreshing sleep, free from headache, relief from pain and anguish, to calm and assuage the weary achings of protracted disease, invigorate the nervous media, and regulate the circulating systems of the body, you will provide yourself with that marvellous remedy discovered by Dr. J. Collis Browne (late Army Medical Staff), to which he gave the name of CHLORODYNE, and which is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.
From Symes & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Medical Hall, Simla, January 5, 1880, to J. T. Davenport, Esq., 33 Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London. "Dear Sir,—We embrace this opportunity of congratulating you upon the widespread reputation this justly esteemed medicine, Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne, has earned for itself not only in Hindostan, but all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported into the country, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of Dr. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy and as a general sedative. In fact, we have personally witnessed under our personal observation during many years. In Cholera, Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is A DELIBERATE BREACH OF FAITH ON THE PART OF THE CHEMIST TO PRESCRIBERS AND PATIENT ALIKE. We are, etc, faithfully yours Symes & Co., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists."
CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood states that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the Inventor of Chlorodyne ; that the story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See "The Times," July 13, 1864.
Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne" on the Government stamp. Overstamping or sealing bottles accompanies each bottle.
CAUTION.—Beware of Piracy an imitation. Sole Manufacturer—J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Russell's Street Bloomsbury ; London.

PROSPECTUS.

This Society has been formed for the purpose of extending to Her Majesty's Naval and Military Forces, Civil Service, and the European and native community in India, the benefits of Co-Operative trading.

The extraordinary success which has attended the Army and Navy and Civil Service Stores in England is so well known and appreciated as to call for little remark here, further than to state that their shares are a most desirable investment, proof of which is afforded by the following tabulated statement :—

Stores.	Annual Sales.	Last Dividend and Bonus.	Present Price of Shares, including Bonus.
Army & Navy Co-Operative Society	£2,619,298	5 per cent. & £1 Bonus	£1 shares £26 10s.
Civil Service Supply Association	£1,859,166	1½ per share.	£10 shares £23 to £25 15s. †
Civil Service Co-Operative Society	£481,120	5 per cent.	£5 shares £5 10s. *
Army and Navy Auxiliary Supply	£521,124	5 per cent.	£1 shares £5 10s. to £5 15s.

† Upon which originally only 2s. 6d. per Share was paid.

* Made up as follows :—Upon each £2 Share a bonus of 16 fully paid Shares of £5 each was added, equal to the value of £80.

The Society's transactions will be, as is the case with similar stores in England, entirely in cash, and no goods will be supplied except on payment of cash or by value-payable-post.

By adhering strictly to the cash system the Directors hope to be able to supply goods in India at prices which have not hitherto been remunerative, and they think it reasonable to expect that officials, European residents and the wealthier portion of the native community will become constituents of this Society, when they find that they can obtain in India goods of the highest quality at lower prices than those which they have been accustomed to pay.

The value-payable-post system, which is well understood and is in continuous operation in India, will enable all residents outside the Presidency towns to avail themselves of the facilities offered by the Society. The cost of carriage will be added to the cash price of articles ordered, but in the case of considerable orders this will not add seriously to the initial cost. At present stores will be opened only at Bombay and Calcutta, but it is intended, if the Society's efforts meet with the success which is anticipated, to open other stores at Madras and other large centres. Every effort will be made on which the Society's business will be conducted will be a guarantee for the freshness of stores, and the novelty and recent manufacture of all confectionery articles, which it is impossible to secure in the goods sold by private traders on a smaller scale.

The managers of each department will be experienced men sent out direct from England, and will be assisted by other employés engaged in India and acquainted with the requirements and habits of Indian customers. It may be relied on that everything that is possible will be done to make the Society's undertaking a success, and to secure to their Indian constituents the benefits which are obtainable only by operations on a large scale and by strict adherence to the system of cash payments.

The Directors have before them a report prepared by a gentleman who was sent to India for purpose of personal inquiry as to the prospects of success attending the establishment of Stores in that country, in which he states that he was carefully studied the subject and given it his best attention, and is convinced of the favourable prospects. This Report accords with information received from other sources.

The Directors have much satisfaction in announcing that they have entered into arrangements with the firms of Messrs. James Finlay & Co., of London, Liverpool and Glasgow, and Messrs. Finlay, Muir & Co., of Calcutta and Bombay, to act as agents to the Society. Messrs. James Finlay & Co.'s business experience of India dates back to 1806. This co-operation with them, it is believed, will be very advantageous to the Society.

The Directors have appointed as General Manager, Mr. T. Geo. Newton, who possesses large business experience, and was for many years closely connected with the Management of the Army and Navy Co-Operative Society in London, where he held the position of confidential assistant to the Managing Directors. His remuneration is partly dependent upon the net profits earned, and his interests are therefore closely identified with those of the Shareholders.

The following Contracts have been entered into :—Contract dated the Thirtieth of April, 1890, between the Society and Messrs. James Finlay and Co., of Glasgow, London and Liverpool, and Messrs. Finlay, Muir & Co., of Calcutta and Bombay. Contracts dated the Thirtieth of April 1890, and 22nd May, 1890, between the Society and James Singleton Hooper, of 11, Comeragh Road, West Kensington, and Contract dated Thirtieth of April, 1890, between the Society and Mr. Thomas Gowan, of St. Wilfrid's Alleyn Road, West Dulwich, copies of which can be seen at the offices of Messrs. Finlay, Muir and Co., the Society's Agents, Calcutta and Bombay.

Application has been made for a quotation of the Society's Shares on the London Stock Exchange.

Applications for shares should be made on the accompanying form and forwarded, with a remittance for the amount of the deposit, to the Agra Bank, Limited, Calcutta, Bombay, and its Branches throughout India. If the whole amount applied for by any applicant be not allotted, the surplus amount paid on deposit will be appropriated towards the sum due on allotment, and where no allotment is made, the deposit will be returned in full.

Allotments in respect of the 4,000 Shares now offered for subscription will be made by the Directors in England, and notice thereof sent out by the earliest possible mail to India.

The Subscription List is open to the General Public. Copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association and of the Prospectus issued in England, can be seen and inspected at the Offices of the Society's Agents in Calcutta and Bombay.

NOTICES.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

HUBBUCK'S PATENT WHITE ZINC PAINT.

TO Architects, Contractors, Dock Companies, Mill Owners, Railway Companies, Ship Owners and all who are desirous of obtaining a reliable and durable Paint, THOMAS HUBBUCK AND SON (the original Patentees of White Zinc Paint) beg to inform the above that "HUBBUCK'S GENUINE PATENT WHITE ZINC PAINT AND OILS" can always be obtained of the undermentioned well known Firms in Bombay. This Paint has successfully stood the test of all climates for many years, and has an ever increasing demand ; it is far superior in pureness of colour, in body, in fineness, and lasting properties to any other Paint ; retains its color, and when mixed with HUBBUCK'S PALE BOILED LINSEED OIL does not crack or blister, and is not affected by atmospheric changes, salt water, or gas). THOMAS HUBBUCK AND SON knowing the importance of such a Paint to the above, trust their Friends will continue to use this world-renowned HUBBUCK'S PATENT WHITE ZINC PAINT, the quality of which never varies

HUBBUCK'S PALE BOILED LINSEED OIL.

THOS. HUBBUCK & SON desire to call attention to their special PALE BOILED LINSEED OIL. This OIL is paler than Raw Linseed Oil and therefore does not discolour White or other delicate colors. By their patent process all the fatty matter (which renders Paint non-drying and sticky) is extracted, making the Paint mixed with this Oil dry quickly with a perfectly hard and smooth surface, prevents blistering, and is therefore consequently much more durable. This Oil has been successfully in use for many years in China, Japan, the West Indies, the Straits Settlements, Burmah, &c. One trial will show the importance of this Oil in a climate like India, and will cause a big demand in general demand through India. THOS. HUBBUCK & SON ship only GENUINE OILS and TURPENTINE, and therefore, trust their friends will see when ordering HUBBUCK'S PAINTS that they also get HUBBUCK'S GENUINE OILS and TURPENTINE. Good Paint is destroyed by using an inferior Oil.

EYESIGHT!

THE necessity for proper testing of the sight before ordering Spectacles cannot be overrated. We have the highest medical authority confirmed by daily experience that imperfect glasses, together with the haphazard plan of selection generally employed, are frequent causes of irremediable injury to the sight, and as no present economy can compensate for such a loss, it behoves all to be cautious how they are tempted to use the common Spectacles now so generally sold by those who keep an ill-assorted collection just to complete a miscellaneous stock.

We make this department of our business a speciality, and we claim to have the largest and most complete stock in India. Our Opticians being thoroughly practical men, we can guarantee the correction of the defects and irregularities of the sight by optical means.

DR. A. MENIST'S PERFECT PEBBLES

Have always been and always are by a very long way the best procurable, and owing to the present favorable rate of exchange, we have been able to reduce their prices, which though very little in advance of other Houses the slightly extra cost is more than compensated for by their superiority and perfection.

It is well known to us from experiments that a great deal of discomfort must arise from the use of spectacles with ill-fitting frames, for instance a pair of lenses in frames a little too wide or a little too narrow would compel the patient to look through the inner or outside sides of the lenses or through their prisms instead of through their centre and which must necessitate a call upon the convergence muscles for increased effort at a time when the accommodation muscles are relaxed. This cannot but be a source of discomfort at all times and a source of danger to the eyes. Several instances have been known in which discomfort in wearing spectacles has been removed as soon as lenses of the same power were put into frames adopted to the requirements of the wearer.

Every precaution is taken by us to supply not only the best lenses procurable but also to supply frames in which the lenses are so placed as to make the wearing of spectacles a pleasure.

A CURIOUS duel has taken place in a travelling circus temporarily stationed in a village outside Paris. Two acrobats quarrelled and resolved to fight a duel. The place chosen was the ring—after the public performance, of course—the conditions being five shots at twenty-five paces. As usual, neither of the combatants was hurt. And their wounded honours being satisfied, the incident terminated. The duellists and their seconds overlooked the presence of two members of their company, who were quietly munching nuts in a corner. These were two trained monkeys, who had been taught to ride round the ring dressed up as soldiers and to fire pistols en route. The monkeys saw the performance of their masters, and when the way was clear they resolved to imitate it. Gravely loading their pistols, they faced each other—not at twenty-five paces, but at five—and fired. They both fell dead, one with its head nearly blown off, and the other shot in the breast. At the sound of the shots the master of the circus rushed in, and found the bodies of the imitative duellists in the ring, with the still smoking pistols lying by them.

DROWNED IN THE SEA.—An inquest was held by the Coroner yesterday, at Middle Colaba, respecting the death of Rama Hurry, a coachman, aged 25 years. On Thursday he went into the sea of Middle Colaba to collect cocoanuts, which had been thrown there as offerings, when he went beyond his depth, and was drowned before any assistance could be rendered him. A verdict of accidental death was recorded.

WARNING TO GHARRYWALLAHS.—At the Esplanade Police Court yesterday, before Mr. Richardson, Inspector Dillon charged Kara Roga and seven other victoria owners with refusing to return to the Byculla Police Office the plates attached to their conveyances which had been declared by the Commissioner of Police unsaitable for public use. On the suggestion of the Inspector that the accused might be made an example of, his Worship fined the accused Re. 1 each.

THEFT OF SILK FROM A GODOWN.—Mahkhabhoy Randyan, a silk merchant, residing at Coombarwada, reports that he had nine bales of raw silk in a godown at Nagpada, which he had purchased from one Abdool Deenmahomed, a dealer in silk. On the 23th ultimo Deenmahomed asked the complainant for the key of the godown and during his absence removed four bales of raw silk, valued at Rs. 550, and absconded to Ahmednuggar, where Deenmahomed was arrested on Thursday.

GAMBLING AT THE COCOANUT FAIR.—Before Mr. Richardson yesterday, at the Esplanade Police Court, Inspector Stanford charged twenty-eight persons with having been found gambling at the Cocoanut Fair, held on the Maidan, on Thursday evening. Several of these, it was ascertained after securing various sums of money by means of the three-card-trick, amused themselves with gambling, of these some were fined by his Worship from Rs. 5 to Rs. 10; while the rest who had been arrested playing with dice, cards and money, were fined from Rs. 2 to Rs. 5.

TREATING A SUMMONS WITH CONTEMPT.—Mr. Smith, Deputy Executive Engineer of the Bombay Municipality, yesterday summoned Jadowjee Mutto, the proprietor of a new building on the Duncan Road, before Mr. Richardson, the Third Acting Presidency Magistrate with permitting his house to be tenanted before adjusting the necessary drainage connections. As the defendant did not appear in answer to the summons, which he had signed, and as he had been previously fined for a similar offence, his Worship fined him Rs. 25, since it appeared that he treated the matter with contempt.

VACCINATION A NECESSITY.—A Bania, named Keshowjee Okada, with four others, were summoned before Mr., Richardson yesterday, at the Esplanade Police Court, by an officer of the Vaccination Department for refusing and neglecting to have their children vaccinated at the required age. The whole of the defendants pleaded in defence that their babies were sick and had been sent out of Bombay for a change. They produced certificates of native doctors to certify that their children had been ill. The Magistrate fined Keshowjee Rs. 10, and the rest of the defendants Rs. 5 each.

THE NEW PRINCE OF BARODA.—To commemorate the happy event of the birth of a third son to the popular Gaekwar his Agent in Bombay, Mr. Pitale, yesterday invited some of his friends to a dinner party, and distributed alms to the poor. The Brahmins, on receiving dakshina, were loud in their blessings on the newly-born infant, his parents, and brother-princes. The short speech of young Balcrushnarao pleased all. At a party also last evening, at the residence of Messrs. Dinaji and Panduranjee, leading men of one of the Hindu castes, the guests assembled there took occasion to express their joy at this happy event. This shows the light in which the Gaekwar is held by the Bombay community.

A MUSALMAN AMONG ANGRY HINDUS.—Pento Premchund, a Hindu, with four others of the same caste became somewhat indignant on Thursday evening last on seeing a Mahomedan amongst the crowd of native boys who had gathered in the water below the Chowpatty Sea-face to pick up the numerous cocoanuts that were being thrown into the sea as an offering to the gods. The party of Hindu devotees immediately on perceiving the Mussalman determined to have him removed from the beach, Gathering around him they set upon him, with their fists and umbrellas, Premchund inflicting a severe wound on his head by breaking a cocoa-nut upon it. The whole of the accused were charged by Inspector Greyhurst with disorderly behaviour before Mr. Richardson yesterday, at the Esplanade Police Court, and Premchund was fined Rs. 5; the rest Rs. 3 each.

ANOTHER RAID ON GAMBLERS.—At the Esplanade Police Court yesterday, before Mr. Richardson, a Bania, named Gooloo, alias Laljee Waljee, was charged by Inspector Sanderson with allowing gambling to be carried on in his house, in Nagdevie Street. The police, having received intimation of the rendezvous of the gamblers proceeded to the house in question and arrested eight men who were engaged in the game, and were in consequence charged with the offence. On the Inspector appearing on the scene a sum of Rs. 15-8, with a metal watch, were found on the ground. On the delinquents being searched Rs. 31-8 were found in their possession. The accused, with the exception of Laljee, pleaded guilty, and were fined Rs. 6 each or six days' imprisonment in default. Laljee Waljee, owner of the house, was fined Rs. 20. with the alternative of 20 days' hard labour.

THE OWNERSHIP OF THE VILLAGE OF VERCUNDA.—A correspondent, writing from Damaun on the 29th ult., says:—Hormusjee Manockjee Mody, the manager of the Apollo Hotel of the late Palonjee's, brought a suit against his aunt Ruttonbai, a widow of the late Mody Dadabhoy Shapoorji, to recover possession of all the estate and property and the village of Vercunda, situated in Damaun, and which were granted to his late uncle, the said Mody by the King of Portugal, The said property and the said village of Vercunda were bequeathed by the said Mody Dadabhoy to his said widow Ruttonbai by his last will and testament of 1879, and in accordance to that testament the possesion of the said village and property was given to his said widow by the Judge of Damaun in December last, and the long-contested suit of the said H. M. Mody, which was heard in Damaun in March last, has been dismissed by the Judge of the Damaun Court, with costs, on Monday, the 28th instant.

FATAL FALL OUT OF A WINDOW.—An inquest, was held by the Coroner yesterday, at the J. J. Hospital respecting the death of Bindeo, a female child, aged 21 months. Deceased was the daughter of a widow named Gunghee, a dealer in vegetable, residing at Duncan Road. On Thursday, the mother left the deceased in charge of her grand-parents who lived in the same room, and went out hawking vegetable, when during her absence the deceased ran up to a window and fell out into the street. Deceased was picked up in an unconscious state, bleeding from a wound on the head and taken to hospital, where she died about an hour after admission. The verdict was that death of Bindee was caused by injuries received by a fall out of a window on the 3rd story of a house, in which window one of the bars is out. The jury are of opinion that the window in its present condition is dangerous to children, and should be put in order.

LAWRENCE & MAYO,

OPHTHALMIC OPTICIANS.

CAUTION TO PARENTS.

PARENTS are invited to bring their children while still young to have their sight tested, free of charge.

Myopia, or Near-sight, is very common, particularly in the Parsi community, and it is generally hereditary a prima facie ground for near-sighted parents to suspect its existence in their children.

This defect imposes the necessity of using the unassisted eyes at too short a range, and the tension of accommodation and convergence required to do this, increases the Myopia rapidly in youth, besides often producing other still more disastrous consequences. If on the other hand suitable glasses are worn, the eyes will not be subjected to this strain, and the sight will not undergo this lamentable deterioration, at School and College.

To present the whole case it ought to be added, that the injury when done, is permanent and incurable, and parents will realize how important it is, that this otherwise progressive defect, should be recognized and corrected, at latest, when the child begins to study.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE

FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 1.

THERE was a further advance of 5-16d. per oz. in the price of Silver in London yesterday, bringing the quotation up to 50 9-16d. per oz.; and Rupee Securities were ¼ per cent. higher in each denomination at £82 and £83, respectively. Consols recovered ⅛ per cent. of their late fall, being quoted at 96; but Indian Sterling Loan was unchanged at 107. Extra allotments of Bills were made by the Indian Council, say 2½ lakhs on Bombay, at 1s. 7 5-16d. and 6 lakhs on Calcutta at 1s. 7 11-32 to 9d., the extreme rate showing an advance of ⅛d. on that obtained at the regular sales on the previous day. The Exchange Banks' buying rate, at 30 days' sight, remained at 1s. 7d. In Paris, French Rentes were ⅛ per cent. higher, at 92½; Exchange on London advanced 3½ centimes, say to fcs. 25·31.

The weekly returns of the Bank of England show no change in the position of the Bank's Reserve since the previous Wednesday, when it stood at 39 per cent. of the Liabilities. Following the advance in the Bank rate to 5 per cent. yesterday, the market rates of discount were put up ½ per cent., making the quotation 4½ per cent. both for short London Bills and six months' sight Indian Bank Paper. About £100,000 in Gold was withdrawn from the Bank yesterday. The weekly shipments of Specie consisted of £160,000 in Silver and £30,000 in Gold to this port.

The London Goat skin sale closed yesterday, both Bombay and Madras skins having been firm, with prices ½d. to 1d. per lb. higher, 730 skins having found buyers out of the 760,000 offered. The Sheep skin rate opened at the last sale rates.

The Liverpool Cotton Market closed steady last evening both generally and for Surats, the total Sales having aggregated 10,000 bales inclusive of 2,000 East Indian. Mid.-Americans remained at 6 11-16d. and Surats were unaltered in value, as also were American Arrivals in all positions excepting August-September, in which they were ½d. lower, at 6½d. per lb. The Imports were nil. The Manchester market was firm.

A further decline of 1-16 cent took place in the price of ready Mid.-Uplands in New York yesterday, at 12¼ cents. Futures for September were one point lower, at 11·01, but for August they were 8 points down, at 11·90.

Locally, there has been next to nothing doing in the staple to-day, sales of 200 bales of Bhownuggar, at Rs. 171½; and 100 bales each of Wadwan and Veerumgaum at Rs. 180 and Rs. 166-7½ respectively, comprising all the business reported. The feeling in the market has been very quiet, but prices may be taken as before.

WHEAT keeps firm in tone, although there has been no improvement in the demand from exporters and the amount of business passing is only moderate. Rates are unaltered for all descriptions.

SEEDS are neglected to a great extent, and transactions have been upon a small scale again to-day, the market remaining quiet, and prices unchanged.

The Receipts of Produce into Bombay yesterday were:—

Cotton	343	bales.
Wheat	7,943	cwt.
Linseed	1,073	"

FREIGHTS show no change. Cotton for January-May shipment to Trieste and Venice has been booked by outside steamers at 21s. 3d. per ton payable at port.

EXCHANGE has advanced considerably in response to the large business done in Calcutta yesterday, and in presence of the further rise in the price of Silver in London. A good deal of Bank Telegraphic has been done to-day at 1s. 7⅞d. for August, 1s. 7 7-16 to 15-32d. for September, and 1s. 7½d. for October-December transfer; but not many Private Bills have been offering here. Six months' sight Credits are quoted in Calcutta, at 1s. 8d. We call this market firm and advancing at the following closing rates for ready business:—

Bank Bills on Demand	1s. 7 15-32d.	to 1d. per rupee.
Do. Telegraphic	1s. 7 13-32d.	"
Do. 3 months' sight	1s. 7 21-32d.	"
Credits do.	1s. 7⅞ to 25-32d.	"
Francs do.	2·09½	"

GOVERNMENT PAPER opened with an upward tendency, and the cash price of Fours advanced to 102 9-16 to ⅝, which quotation was maintained for a time, the rate for this month's settlement having been 102 7-16; but towards the close a weaker feeling prevailed and the final price for Money was yesterday's closing rate of 102⅝. For 4½ per cents the rate has been lowered to 104 nominal.

SHARES.—A number of Cotton Mill shares have again moved upwards to-day, and we report an advance of Rs. 27½ in Hyderabad Deccan; of Rs. 15 each in Alliance, Coorla, and Jewraj Balloo; of Rs. 10 in Lukmidas; and of Rs. 5 each in Howard and Bullough, Khatao Mucunji, Leopold and Queen, at our quotations. Bombay-Burma Trading are Rs. 50 higher for the first issue, and Rs. 15 for the others, at Rs. 3,275 and Rs. 820, respectively. Delhi and Northern Flour are Rs. 5 higher, at Rs. 180. National Bank shares are Rs. 15 lower, at Rs. 165 per share.

RECEPTION TO MR. MUDHOLKAR.

(FROM CORRESPONDENTS.)

NASIK, Aug. 1.

An influential meeting, consisting of upwards of one thousand men, was held here yesterday, at 5 p.m., to welcome Mr. Rangnath Narsingha Mudholkar, pleader, a Congress delegate. Mr. Parashram Vishnu Yogi presided. The advantages gained from his travel, the great spread of education, high industry, and the liberty of the British public were briefly narrated. The meeting dissolved, with the distribution of attar, gulab, flowers, and pan-supari.

AMRAOTI, Au. 1.

Mr. R. N. Mudholkar, one of the Congress Delegates who went to England, was cordially and enthusiastically received at Badnera and Amraoti stations. At Amraoti about 500 people came to receive him on the station. The Amraoti station was tastefully decorated with buntings and evergreens and a band was in attendance. Addresses were read at both the stations, to which Mr. Mudholkar replied briefly, and in a manner suitable to the occasion. Crowds followed Mr. Mudholkar to his house with a band soon after the distribution of pan-supari, flowers, and attar.

THE PADDY TAX IN CEYLON.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "BOMBAY GAZETTE."

SIR,—In your recent interesting article on the working of the paddy-tax in Ceylon, you assume that the state of things is much better with us under our ideal land-revenue administration. Unfortunately, the facts seem to point very much the other way. There are no doubt many important and fundamental points of difference between the Indian dependency and the southern colony. Ceylon has a smaller population to the square mile—about 98 as against 228·9 in British India. In Ceylon, according to the Census of 1881, there is even less than one-fourth of the population engaged in agriculture (about 644,000 persons out of a population of 2,761,396 souls); in India we have nine-tenths so engaged. In Ceylon, there is no village Bannia middleman between the State and the peasant as with us: there, the State is both landlord and creditor. In the Sinhalese Island, again, the law and the law's procedure are said to be much simpler than in India; and the administration of civil justice is cheaper and more expeditious. The Sinhalese have their village tribunals (gam sabawas) established or rather restored by the Village Tribunals Act of 1871 for the adjudication of civil disputes. Besides, the Legislative Council of Ceylon, which votes the supplies of the year, though it contains a smaller non-official element than our Indian Councils, allows, unlike these latter, nominative representation for the various interests, three members, representing the planting and mercantile interests, and three the Sinhalese, Tamil, and Eurasian communities. Such and other points of dissimilarity, however, notwithstanding the economic condition of the peasantry seems to be much the same in both the peninsula and the island,—possibly worse in the peninsula than in the island. For in Ceylon, the peasantry, under the pressure of the paddy-tax and other State exactions, parts with only 25 per cent. of its lands in ten years, or 2·5 per cent. a year; in British India, where there is no diversity of occupations as in Ceylon to draw off large portions of the population from the land, the ryots have to give away, under our boasted system of "light" assessments, more than 4·5 per cent. of their lands every year, or nearly half in ten years. The latest figures relating to transfers of landed property in British India, excluding Bombay and Bengal, which furnish no statistics on the point, are for 1888-89. (Vide Agricultural Statistics of British India for 1888-89, page 59.)

Total area transferred in acres—

By order of Court	350,212 acres
By private contract or gift	4,481,609 acres
Total	4,831,821 acres out of a total cultivated acreage of 107·7 millions, or about 47 per cent. The "model province" of the Punjab shows even a worst state of things; the figures being for 1888-89,

Transferred area—

By order of Court	24,484 acres
By private contract or gift	1,660,627 acres
Total	1,685,111 acres

out of a cultivated acreage of 20·7 millions, or over 8 per cent. in a single year, or in other words, if the present rate of transfer continues for 12 years more, the land in the Punjab will have completely changed hands. Certainly, such extensive transfers of land as are at present taking place all over in British India indicate a state of agricultural poverty and indebtedness, even more acute and grievous than there exists, according to Mr. Starey, in Ceylon.

The agrarian difficulty is, however, in both countries, of an identical nature, and apparently has its origin in the operation of an identical cause, viz., the assertion and application, in all its abstract unmitigated severity, of the economic doctrine of state-landlordism with its corollary of the "unearned increment"; and when Mr. Starey recommends as a solution of the difficulty the transfer of the island colony to the peninsular dependency, he appears to see us from a long distance, and the "distance" only, "lends" false "enchantment to the view." Clearly a more administrative change, unaccompanied by a radical change of policy, can be no remedy for the evils that afflict the peasantry of Ceylon as of India; and the only effective cure for such a state of things in both the countries seems to lie in the direction of a permanent settlement and limitation of the State demand on the land.—Yours, &c.,

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "BOMBAY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Will you kindly allow me to express my humble opinion through your widely-circulated paper, that the sooner the law upon "the relevancy of facts," which is contained in sections 6 to 16 of the Indian Evidence Act I. of 1872, be revised and remodelled the better. Its urgent necessity will be amply seen from a mere perusal of an able pamphlet, "The Theory of Relevancy for the Purpose of Judicial Evidence," by G. C. Whitworth, Esq., of the Bombay Civil Service, and author of the Anglo-Indian Dictionary. The legislature, will, I am sure, confer a great boon on the law-executing class should they be pleased to recast the law on the basis of the theory clearly discerned by that able officer. It is very strange that though ten years have elapsed since the first publication of the essay on the subject, the law on relevancy has been allowed to continue in its present ambiguous state.—Yours, &c., H. G. DESAI.

EXECUTION OF THE CLERK ROAD MURDERERS.

THE three convicts, Cassum Fakroodeen, Mahomed Hoosein Alisaheb, and Pandu Mankujee, who were to have been hanged last Saturday on the sentence of Mr. Justice Farran at the last Criminal Sessions of the High Court, will be executed this morning at H. M.'s Common Jail, Oomercarry.

A THOUSAND francs for one glass of beer is a "compensation" which the most sanguine publican cannot hope for. It seems, however, from the report of a case in one of the Brussels courts, that a thirsty Belgian recently paid thus prodigiously in one of the cafés of that city. After drinking a "bock," he found that he had no smaller sum of money in his pocket than a thousand-franc note, which he handed to the waiter with a polite apology, and asked him to exchange it. The waiter ran out of the café to get the change, but he never returned. It was an opportunity which the providence of Bacchus was not likely to offer him a second time in his life, and he resolved not to depise such a providence. After waiting a long while for the return of the man with the change, the guest asked the landlord to pay him the balance, as he wished to go about his business. The landlord lectured him for his imprudence in trusting so large a sum to a man of whom he knew nothing, and declined to admit his responsibility for the payment of the change. So the guest prosecuted the landlord. The judge not only repeated the defendant's lecture to the plaintiff, but obliged the plaintiff to pay the costs of the action.

VANITY FAIR.

(FROM OUR LADY CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, July 10.

Floods and strikes are the order or disorder of the day—strikes among the Grenadiers, strikes among the Police, strikes among the clouds. But the disorganization above is the very best thing to keep order below. What more cooling to hot-headed enthusiasm than a drenching summer shower—what more excellent and effectual method of clearing the streets than the opportune loosening of the check-string of the sky shower-bath? How satisfactory to Sir Edward Bradford if the weather office was always in harmonious co-operation with Scotland-yard. But weather and strikes have no effect on the lovers of cheap sales. It takes more than a rain-storm to quench the fire of bargaining enthusiasm in the heart of the average Londoner, and more than the report of a riot to subdue the dauntless soul of a seeker after remnants. The simple legend, "Clearance Sale this week," has the inspiriting effect of the bugle-call on the war-horse, or the tootling of the Salvation brass band on the dwellers in the highways and byways, and the British Matron rallies all her forces at once for the charge. Was there ever an attack in the annals of warfare more fierce than that on "the short-lengths" table at the Army and Navy Stores. Half such energy used in storming an insurgent city would result in its immediate surrender. If the Duke of Cambridge realized what splendid fighting material there is amongst his officers' womankind he would enlist at the earliest opportunity an Amazon corps who would courageously lead the van when there was the prospect of cities to be pillaged, or camps worth robbing en route. But seriously, was there ever a madder mania than bringing up a lot of things that are too short, or too long for their legitimate purpose. Though the fashion is for a contrast of materials, it does not lie in a mingling of beige and mousseline de laine and tweed all in one costume, like that historical garment, Joseph's many-coloured coat. But what else can be done with the piles of stuffs that are annexed by the purchasers at the stores? Some people find them useful if they have little girls to dress, but this year's large plaid and damasks prohibits such an intention being carried out, unless by those who do not think it unbecoming to have a small child bisected by an enormous pattern. There must be many of that mind, to judge by the rapid clearance of the remnant table. Everywhere the same besieging of the counters tells of the decline of the season, and the dreary constancy of the rain suggests November, not Midsummer. Still there is no cessation of gaiety, and every night brings its ball, reception, concert, or conversazione. Lady Ardilaun began the week by an entertainment at her interesting house, in Carlton House Terrace. One of the pleasures of her parties is to wander through the rooms, which are filled with charming works of art, or to saunter on the terrace. But the never-ceasing rain kept everyone in-doors, and conversation was as brilliantly sustained as usual.

Lady Londesborough's ball, in Grosvenor Square, was also a splendid success, though the number of Army guests was considerably reduced on account of the soldiers being confined to barracks in consequence of the refractory conduct of the Guards and Police. There were some lovely gowns to be seen. A daffodil yellow silk had a drapery of greenish yellow chiffon, like a flower sheath opening at the side to show the brilliant colour underneath. The bodice, which was cut in a deep V back and front, had a soft fall of chiffon, and full sleeves of the chiffon puffed on the shoulders made the wearer's plump arms look delicately white in contrast. Another gown, copied from the colouring of a pansy, had an underskirt of delicate lilac silk and bodice and train of purple velvet, showing here and there a cool green lining. Clusters of purple pansies fastened the sleeves on the shoulders, and a fan of gossamer hand-painted pansies and a bouquet of all shades from the darkest to the lightest lilac pansies with their leaves, were tied with knots of broad green satin to match the colours of the dress. A shell-pink gown made with a deep twiss belt, edged with silver, was also a novelty. The bodice of pink chiffon was made full into the belt, and the long open sleeves were gathered into a short quilled cockle-shell-shaped sleeve of the pink silk, edged with the delicate silver passementerie. A broad scarf of silk, caught in with silver tassels, looped up the chiffon drapery at the left side, showing the accordion-pleated silk underskirt, edged with silver trimming. To this costume a chain of pink feathers, a bouquet of wild roses, and a chain of pink coral beads, twisted in and out of the classically coiled dark hair, gave the finishing touches. Among the guests were the Duchess of Leeds and the Ladies Osborne, Countess Cadogan, the Marchioness of Bristol, Countess Granville, Earl and Countess Listowel—in fact the smartest of smart people showed themselves for a few minutes amongst the distinguished crowd that Lady Londesborough always attracts to her receptions.

The Stanley-Tennant wedding is the next affair of importance to take place, and as at the Jubilee celebration, the Abbey is found quite too small for the number who wish to see how the trying ordeal of marriage affects the hero who has made light of all other difficulties. Among the wedding presents it is said that diamonds are as plentiful as our present rain-drops, and there are also some lovely ornaments of native workmanship coming from Zanzibar. On Saturday afternoon Mrs. Tennant will receive the guests at 2, Richmond Terrace, where there will be an al-fresco entertainment, after which the bride and bridegroom will start for a quiet honeymoon in the country. Among the many effusions in honour of the occasion Mr. Harford published a song, called "Bright To-morrow," which is being sold to collect funds for the purchase of a missionary steamer, the Dorothy, for Lake Victoria Nyanza. Mr. C. Wyllie, 13, De Vere Gardens, is one of the treasurers, and promises that all who subscribe before to-day shall have their names printed on a silk banner and presented to the bride. This is a specimen of the poetry, which sounds very fine, though, owing to perhaps a lack of the finer brain qualities, I fail to catch its meaning:—

She comes with Love. Wherever hearts
By ki ndred ties are linked in one
Beneath her spell Despair departs
Like morning clouds before the sun.
She sings sweet songs of future years,
Her visions calm all prese nt sorrow;
She bidde th lovers cease their fears
By whispering of a bright to-morrow.

There is something very suggestive of the Christmas, Easter, and birthday card in this effusion—a kind of a striving after the unattainable which results in a mixing up of the pronouns in such a manner that the original intention is quite lost. If I knew Mr. Harford and had the average courage of the Briton, I should like to ask him who is "She" who comes with love, and what does he mean in face of Mona Caird and Tolstoi's decisions about love and marriage, &c., in propounding such very old-fashioned sentiments? But I have not the courage.

Just as Mr. Harford gives us a rechauffé of old Christmas-card sentiments and calls it a new song, a certain Tom Lee—an American—and a woman, I am sure, hashes up all the old novels and romances she has ever read and calls it "Stephanie, A Novel." As far as a new cover, new print, new paper, and a birthday since 1890 go, Stephanie is a novel, but so far as the incidents and the descriptions, it might take its place early in the century. Is there anything in this description of a girl that you have not read over and over again in the pages of the Family Herald or Young Ladies' Journal? "A young girl, tall, slender, and graceful is leaning against one of the arches that support the roof of the porch. Her hood has fallen off, exposing a mass of jet black hair coiled loosely at the back of her head and waving softly down over a low brow of extreme whiteness. Beneath the arching eyebrows, and shadowed by long curling lashes, are a pair of large grey eyes—of that soft velvetty tint so rarely seen—within whose depths one almost loses one's self. It is a face once looked on, never to be forgotten. The charm lies not so much in the handsome features as in the sad intense expression of the deepest eyes, and the proud curve of the full rosy lips." This is the heroine, as she drinks in the crisp night air with delight, though all things seem so hollow and vain. Of course, she is worrying about a lover who is dilatory after the fashion of such girls' lovers. Then there are thrilling incidents ending up with a sensational scene when all things are made straight before the curtain drops. Such is Tom Lee's ideal Stephanie.

A more interesting book is "Thyme and Rue" by Margaret Cross. The hero and heroine, a peculiar young couple, have been brought up in an out-of-the-way village, by a clever old man who has a fad for teaching the new generation to lead "the simple life," which, according to his ideal, is to do as the old rhyme describes:

"When Adam delved and Eva span
Who was then the gentleman."

Juliet, the heroine, wears home-spun linen, hair out of the water, and does the house work. Harry Neville, the hero, works on his farm and dresses like a plough-boy. They know nothing of the world, love, or vanity, consequently they agree to be engaged and married. Of course, before this comes off Juliet begins to weary of the monotony of her home life, and, losing health, is ordered change of air. Then every other change comes. She has plenty of money in her own right, which smoothes away all difficulties in the way of seeing life in its pleasantest phases. After Juliet departs, Harry too becomes impatient and leaves home to see the world. They meet casually, and the story closes happily.

If the test of a good tragedy is to wring the soul of its audience with anguish, the success of a farcical comedy is to make it convulse with laughter, and "Nerves," at the Comedy Theatre, seems to attain this object very thoroughly, though on critical analysis of Mr. Comyns Carr's play, it is hard to say what there is so very ludicrous in the representation

CASUAL LETTERS FROM ARAMPUR.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

ARAMPUR, July 30.

The news had come upon us like a thunderclap. A circle of blanched, astounded faces, betokened the emotions too deep for immediate utterance that surged in the bosoms of Arampur. The idle, cheerful, babble that usually distinguishes the morning gatherings of our society was suddenly hushed; palled misery reigned on every countenance. "'Tis too dreadful!" murmured the Judge in broken accents, "incredible, impossible, horrible!" "Yes, 'tis all that," rejoined our Potts, in funereal tones; "but 'tis true gentlemen, and pity 'tis true? The ingratitude of uprooting me of all people! of tearing me from Arampur where I have lived for fifteen years or so, dispensing the blessings of a steadily improving meat-supply, encouraging cleanliness, vivifying the municipal spirit, in short, a very epitome of good works—and where I fully expected to live another fifty years or so, and die universally honoured, lamented, and beloved. I say, to think of transplanting me in this inconsiderate way! It is shocking not to say profane." Here Potts paused: his emotions got the better of him and Dare sympathetically pressed a peg upon his favourable notice. "Dreadfully sad, old man, don't you know," he said, but 'tis always the way—just when you're very comfortable, nicely-settled, laid in a new stock of seeds for your garden and all that sort of thing, Government walks you off to the other side of the world, don't you know: beastly nuisance, but it can't be helped and you must bear up, Potts; we'll never forget your virtues: and will send the hat round and put up a bust, by George, in the municipal office—always remember you then, don't you know." Potts pressed his friendly hand and gulped down the peg spasmodically: partly under protest as it were. You will have guessed, my readers, the nature of the tidings which had fallen upon our placid, unsuspecting community like a bolt from the blue sky. Potts was under orders to leave, and leave at once. Arampur, without Potts! There was not, I believe, one amongst us sufficiently hardy to conjure up that unwonted picture without the most disturbing emotions. Callow alone, amidst the general gloom, felt a transient satisfaction; he had rarely, if ever, in his life before had an opportunity of making so strictly apposite a quotation. So that while Potts was buried in his peg tumbler: and all the rest of us were speechless and dejected, Callow commenced in his shrill voice with

"Quis desiderio sit pudor aut modus
Tam cari capitis! Prescipe lugubres
Cantus melpemene."

"Dry up wid your heathen jargon," ejaculated Teaque, giving the great classic a dig with his elbow that discomposed him seriously. It certainly is a fact that the refinements of education are differently appreciated in Arampur. Callow confided in me the other day that owing to the total absence of a receptive and attentive audience his stock of quotations was diminishing, "and I really think, Brown, that in a place like this, steeped in ignorance, impatient of improvement, I shall have to give up my favorite authors and study the style of 'Soapy Sponge.'" The days passed rapidly; in and around Potts' bungalow were all the melancholy indications of his near departure. From morn till night our inestimable Magistrate was occupied in carding boxes and circulating lists of property for sale. We hovered round him with delicate sympathy: we bought his furniture; his books; his horses, carts, and all that was his. He enriched the Pinafore Club with a munificent donation of ancient garments; he passed sadly among us a shadow of his former self. It is a solemn and pathetic sight that final leave-taking between a man and the scene of his greatest working triumphs. Have we not all at some time or another participated in the mournful ceremony? I bethink me of my old friend Jones; good old Jones, who for years had laboured in an out-lying district where there was work in plenty, but little renown to be gained. And the natives in his small kingdom knew and loved him; in sunshine and storm he had done his duty among them. He had tasted of the joys of life in Junglepur; and had drunk deep of the cup of sorrow. Look in the little cemetery behind the little church, and you will see small white crosses, more than one, each marking a spot where Jones must leave a part of his heart for ever buried in Junglepur. And now in the drowning pitiless rain of a July evening he is about to take his final leave of the district in which he has dwelt so long. Jones and Mrs. Jones and several little Jones's have driven to the miserable roadside station to meet the mail train. Wild gusts of wind drive the pelting rain through the steamy air: the pitiful lamps flicker under the dripping roof, shedding a dim and fitful light over the party. The little ones tired and fretful are marvelling in childish fashion why all this discomfort is suddenly come upon them; why they are not long since snuggly tucked up in their familiar cots. The old domestics, sobbing over their little pets, vie with each other in soothing their last moments: carry them hither and thither, chaunting weird Oriental lullabies, furtively and with touching affection performing all the last offices of pent-up love. Jones is bustling about shaking hands and bidding good-bye with bravely simulated stoicism. The principal members of the community—the banker, the native judge, the postmaster, the mamlutdar, and the head clerk, form a deputation of farewell: time-worn ceremonies are performed—pan and attar are exchanged; jasmine wreaths are hung upon the necks of the departing family. There is a scream in the distance, and through the storm the glowing eyes of the approaching train pierce the darkness. In with you Jones, in with you Mrs. Jones, and all your little olive branches—a few last fond kisses bestowed upon the children; a few more words of good-will—a few drooping flowers, and Jones is speeding away for ever from Junglepore, from his life's work—speeding home. To-morrow Mr. Smith will assume the reins of office: in a week Jones will be forgotten. Poor Jones will he, do you think, forget Junglepur, and those little white crosses:

Well, well, the passing of Potts was wanting in some of those painful details at least; there were no small Potts's wailing and stabbing with their childish sorrow older hearts. But the ceremony was nevertheless extremely imposing and affecting. His carriage was filled with floral tributes, and the platform was crowded with his enthusiastic native admirers. Personally, I was not present—because Potts' train left at a very unholy hour, but I gave him my blessing earlier in the evening, and I have no doubt it will greatly profit him.

The next morning when I awoke and fully realized the awful loss we had sustained, I confess to a feeling of intense depression. Alas, I reflected, the crowning glory of Arampur Society is taken from us: we shall become commonplace. Potts!

Potts!

"But, oh! the heavy change now thou art gone
Now thou art gone, my Potts, and never must return
Thee, oh Potts! thee, the drains, the Butchers' stalls, and all their echoes mourn."

"In short," concluded, Callow "sic transit gloria mundi."

Potts has been succeeded by Figs. Figs takes little or no interest in the mutton-supply: and absolutely none in the municipality, or the sanitary condition of the circumjacent nullahs. "Figs," I said to him the other morning, "come round with me to inspect the development of that entirely new odour recently discovered by Potts." "Brown," he replied, "I'll be d—d if I do:" Now, what can you expect from a Cantonment Magistrate of such opinion?

This is a great time for barra khanas in Arampur: and our leading intellects have been nobly and earnestly exercising themselves to devise methods of alleviating the gloomy melancholy which usually broods over these time-honored functions. "For my part," said Lancet the other day, "I disapprove of barra khanas on principle, especially during the rains. Why, my dear Brown, because you are still in pitiable bondage to the rule of a ridiculous fashion should I jeopardize my health, possibly even my life, by sharing at your hospitable board fragments of stale fish in clammy jelly; and half a score of other curious mysterious dishes that fill me with the gravest forebodings? You think as little of offering me oyster patties as though you were a modern Borgia. I am expected to mix numerous alcoholic drinks, all of which disagree with me separately, and are fatal to me combined; I am kept up smoking long beyond my customary hours, and the next morning after a night of frightful dreams, I find myself at hospital with an eye like a peeled plover's egg and a hand shaking like a blancmange! And all for what? That half a dozen of us, who meet two or three times every day on much more rational terms, may gather together in severely uncomfortable costume and enjoy two or three hours' pregnant silence or gentle boredom! No, no, give me my teaspoonful of Liebig and an instructive book, something about anatomy, or hygiene for choice—and you will never find me regretting a barra khana." This is all very well in its way: it is partly true; but the accusation is scarcely novel. Succeeding generations have groaned under the tyranny of barra khanas: successive holocausts of victims on medical certificate have borne witness to its severity. But no one ever thinks of breaking the bonds and proclaiming himself free. "Going to old Snooks' to-night?" enquires A. with a sigh. "Yes," rejoins B. with a groan. "Infernal bore," they utter in chorus: and proceed to induce themselves in their evening clothes and greet Mr. Snooks with the stereotyped smile. They simulate a languid pleasure: they discuss the weather with the fair partners chance or seniority has bestowed on them. What smothered yawns; what suppressed yearnings for the freedom of A.'s mess or B.'s long chair; and the thirty or forty other martyrs are all in like case—till with pious thankfulness we note the senior lady taking her leave and it is "Good-night, Mr. Snooks—such a delightful evening." "Good-night Snooks, old boy—enjoyed myself immensely," and so on till the gate is passed, when the tune changes to "Thank heavens that's over, Gad what an evening! was ever anything so slow, and did you taste that mutton—pheugh, 15 years old if it was an hour: claret corked again, &c., &c., &c."

I confess I never met a single exception to the general rule: that is to say, I never met a reasonable soul who professed to enjoy a barra khana or who refused to go to one when invited. When this proposition was boldly stated it excited much discussion among the geniuses of Arampur. Of course, here our entertainments are necessarily less dull, and more convivial than in most places—because we know each other so very, very well; and in the words of the poet "to know us is to love us." But still there are times when even an Arampur dinner party hangs fire a little. This we are reluctantly compelled to admit. "There's something wrong in the system," says one, "parties are too large and conversation is never general." "But how," suggests another, "if you have a smaller party none of whom will utter a word?" The prospect thus opened up was certainly unpleasing. "I think that something ought to be done to amuse the guests after dinner," I said decisively; "as it is we gather together, eat moodily, and straightway hover on the borderland of sleep. This is ignoble." "Yes, but what would you suggest?" queried Marmalade despondently. "There's no one to sing: we can't dance: I don't believe we have an amateur conjuror amongst us; and you know you always poohpooh theatricals." "I have a tame monkey," interposed Nimrod with animation, "a most engaging tricky little beast. Next time you give a barra khana, Major, say the word, and you shall have the loan of it after dinner. My word, Sir, what a gay evening you will have!"

"I propose a recitation," said Callow in a voice of profound melancholy—"I would willingly recite to you—if only you would listen: I have a beautiful poem now in hand, Brown, which I will read at your next party if you like; it isn't cheerful exactly, but very moral and sad. I call it the pangs of dissolution."

I thanked the young man. I said that I felt sure he meant well, but he had not quite caught my idea. It wasn't my wish to intensify the gloom; or to compel people to go to sleep: I hoped, in fact, to attain precisely opposite results. And if there is one thing more immediately deadly and irritating than another it is a young tragic reciter. I recollect one once years ago. He was a beautiful creature with a wild eye and a backboneless appearance. His repertory consisted of one appalling piece, called "Twenty minutes in hell." And when I had heard it twenty or thirty times it really affected me very much, as its title would imply. But bless my soul, how the ladies did rave over that young man! His genius, his passion, his elocution, his eyes, his hair! I have always loathed very young reciters, with an Irving walk, since that time. So I implored Callow to check his inclinations and court notoriety in some other way. "Tableaux vivants," suggested Badli, "you couldn't have anything simpler, or more effective. I will perform myself. I and the members of my court, alas, I should say the court that was mine will sit in our curule chairs, you know, and Pukka will burst rudely in, clad in skins representing the sacrilegious Gaul—do you see?" "Fair, if we only had Potts," chuckled Teaque, "we'd put him on a pedestal—as Hamlet saying on that this too solid, solid flesh would melt—" but we all frowned down this irreverent levity."

SUICIDE BY A EUROPEAN.

AN inquest was held by the Coroner, Dr. T. Blaney, yesterday at the Royal Flour Mill, Victoria Road, Byculla, respecting the death of William Brewty, aged 77 years. Deceased was an old retired Jockey and Trainer. Yesterday morning he was found drowned in the hot water tank of the Royal Flour Mills. It appears the deceased had been living with Mr. H. B. Ginger, the Zoologist of the Victoria Gardens, for some months, and lately became very depressed in mind, as he had not heard from his family in England for some time.

The following evidence was recorded.

Henry Berriman Ginger, a Zoologist, in the Victoria Gardens said: Deceased was a retired Jockey and Trainer. His age was 77 years. He had known him for the last 25 years. Deceased was always a sober abstemious man and came to live with him since last Christmas and had no occupation. His family is in England and he had not heard from them for some months and this preyed upon his mind. Deceased had a son in Poona. He was perfectly right and there was nothing the matter with him yesterday morning that he could see. Between 9 and 10 a.m. on Tuesday, deceased left home as usual without saying where he was going. He waited for him until 10 p.m. but deceased did not return. About 4-45 a.m. yesterday a man from the Royal Flour Mill, came to his bungalow, and informed him, that the body of a man who was living with the deponent, was floating in the Mill tank. Witness then went and reported the matter to the Police, and came back. The body of the deceased had then been removed from the tank. It is an open tank with a very low wall round it, and is in a secluded place. It is about 100 paces from his bungalow. The deceased could not swim, and he supported him in Bombay. Deceased had money at home, and was expecting to receive some of it. He was not in debt that witness knew of. About five weeks ago, deceased was so much disappointed at not receiving letters from home, that he said he had a good mind to go and drown himself. He retired from business about 12 or 14 years ago, and then took charge of a brewery business in Cambridge. Deceased gave that the business up, when Mr. Gladstone increased the the tax on malt, and made it so, that brewery was not very profitable, and deceased gave it up. Deceased came to India for the last time about three and a half year ago, and did no business. He was of a cheerful disposition, and willing to work, and if he had got work, deponent believed deceased would have been all right, and it would have kept his mind right. Deceased returned to India to recover some outstandings, but he did not recover them, and that also preyed on his mind.

Arthur Avron, an Engineer of the Royal Flower Mill, living on the premises, said: A little after 6 a.m., yesterday he was informed that the body of the deceased was floating in the tank. He at once sent for the police and they took the body out. The hot water from the engine is discharged into the tank, the temperature of the water at 10 o'clock Thursday morning was between 130° and 135° Fahrenheit, the water is generally too hot to bathe in. There is a depth of 17 or 18 feet of water in it.

Jamal Lookmankhan, a stoker in the Royal Flour Mill, said: At 6 o'clock yesterday morning, he found the body of the deceased floating in the tank face downwards. It was dressed in coat, shirt, banian trousers, socks and cooks; and the cap of the deceased was floating in the tank near him. His skin had pulled off in many places, on account of the action of the hot water in the tank. There were no wounds or bruises on the body.

The jury on the evidence returned the following verdict. That the death of William Brewty, was caused by drowning himself in a tank, while in a state of temporary insanity.

THE FENN DIVORCE SUIT.

THE petition for dissolution of marriage between Capt. Fenn and Mrs. Fenn, presented by the former, came on for hearing on the 24th ult. in the Recorder's Court, when Messrs. Moylan and Eddis appeared for the petitioner and Messrs. VanSomeren and Fagan for Mrs. Constance Fenn.

Mr. Moylan, addressing the Recorder, said that an objection had been taken by his learned friend (Mr. VanSomeren) as to the jurisdiction in this case. It appeared to him (Mr. Moylan) a well-founded objection, though he was found to say he thought it was due entirely to a misprint in the Act. Under the Lower Burma Courts Act, as it now stood, divorce suits could now be instituted in the Special Court of Lower Burma. The Lower Burma Courts Act has indirectly conferred original jurisdiction on the Special Court, which was a Court of Appeal. Section 3 of the Indian Divorce Act declared that the expression "High Court meant in British Burma the High Court of Judicature in Fort William of Bengal." But that had been subsequently amended by the Lower Burma Courts Act of 1889, which declared that in Burma the Special Court shall constitute the High Court meant under the Lower Burma Courts Act of 1889. Clause 10 of the Indian Divorce Act says that "any husband may present a petition to the District Court or to the High Court praying that his marriage may be dissolved on the ground that his wife has since solemnization thereof been guilty of adultery." Now the High Court referred to in this clause 10 would, according to the Lower Burma Courts Act of 1889, be the special Court. So that the effect has been to confer on the Special Court original jurisdiction to hear and try divorce suits. It was clear, therefore, that there had been a blunder on the part of some one as it could hardly have been intended that two Judges of a Court who have no original jurisdiction should sit to try divorce suits and there is nothing in the Lower Burma Courts Act to cut out our rights under the Indian Divorce Act. He (Mr. Moylan) thought this was an admirable specimen of the careful way in which acts referring to Lower Burma are prepared and drafted up in India. His Honour would notice that as regards the clauses which deal with His Honour's powers as Recorder there was nothing giving His Honour special powers as regards Divorce matters; that has to be ascertained by reference to the Divorce Act and the Lower Burma Courts Act of 1889. Another curious matter in connection with this

TWO VIEWS OF THE PASSION-PLAY.

We have two long accounts of this year's Passion-Play before us, those which have appeared from the pens of Archdeacon Farrar and Mr. Stead respectively. Both wield the pen of a ready writer, and both are men of broad views. It is interesting, therefore, to compare the impressions which the play has made on the two men.

I.—AN "ANACHRONISM" IN AN "ALIEN ATMOSPHERE."

Is the play right or wrong? asks Archdeacon Farrar in his pamphlet not up little book. (Heinemann: 2s. 6d.) He answers "not a few English men and women, of earnest and reverent minds, who denounce the play as blasphemous and consider it a sin to witness it," think such a view is "harsh and insular." But he has his own scruples for all that, and thinks that even if the play is not wrong up to date it will become so if it goes on much longer:—

This question may well be questioned whether the suppression of the play has not at last become desirable. It has degenerates into a European spectacle, criticised in all the newspapers by hundreds of reporters as though it were an opera in Dresden or Vienna, it becomes, also a fatal anachronism. It is endangered by an alien atmosphere. The play derives its origin from days in which the whole attitude of the minds of men in relation to religious questions was very different from what now it is. I must confess that the tremendous realism of the Crucifixion in the play —especially the piercing of the side by a spear, which, by a mechanical contrivance of the spear-head, leaves the semblance of a deep gash—seemed to me gratuitously oppressive. Up to the Crucifixion scene I could watch and listen with profit; but from the moment that the Cross was raised my imagination was perturbed and overwhelmed with the doubt whether this scene was not far too majestically sacred for such presentation. . . The gravest, the wisest, the most serious of the Ober-Ammergau villagers are the first to avow that this decade shall witness the last Passion Play. They have an instinctive sense that the world has outgrown the need for their efforts, and would end in making them unreal, vulgar, and profane. This humble flower from the Middle Ages has lived on, as it were, in the crevice of its native rock; but it is doubtful whether it can long keep its bloom and fragrance in the altered atmosphere and crowded soil.

The old order changeth, yielding place to new,
And God fulfils Himself in many ways
Lest one good custom should corrupt the world.

Above all, the Archdeacon would regret the continuance of the play if Mr. Augustus Harris (say) were to take it up:—

The consciences of Christendom might well cry out in alarm against the hideous profanation of transplanting such a spectacle from its true surroundings in the hearts of a simple, believing peasantry to pollute it into wicked and blasphemous vulgarity by setting it upon the boards of some coarse rendezvous of idlers, or worse, in Paris or in London. The Ober-Ammergauers might make thousands of pounds by accepting such offers. To their honour, they have always resisted them. . . . It is a curious accident that this year the cross was blown down. Some of the villagers see in this accident an omen that the play ought no longer to be continued; and, indeed, it is said that some of them believe that they have had a heavenly intimation that henceforth they are quit of their olden vow, and that with this year the public decennial repetition of the play should cease for ever. It may be well for them—well for their happiness and for their faith—if they come to this decision.

II.—A PRESENT-DAY "ACTUALITY."

Mr. Stead's book (Review of Reviews office: 1s.), unlike Archdeacon Farrar's, is a guide as well as a commentary. As it is profusely illustrated, and contains an English version of the play side by side with the German, it will doubtless become the indispensable handbook for all visitors to Ober-Ammergau. But it is with Mr. Stead's commentary that we are at present concerned. Archdeacon Farrar, it will be seen, regards the play as an anachronism. In interesting contrast with this view is that of Mr. Stead, who finds the great charm of the play in its Actuality:—

These people on the stage at Ober-Ammergau are not lay figures, mere abstract representations of the virtues or the opposite. They live, breathe, and act as if they were actors in a French or Russian novel. That is the great difference. These poor players have brought our Lord to life again. In their hands He is no mere influence or abstraction, no Infinite and Almighty ruler of the universe.

Archdeacon Farrar, we have seen, shrank in horror from the idea of "taking the Passion-Play to great cities." Mr. Stead, on the other hand, took London to Ober-Ammergau, and saw all the events of the daily newspaper transfigured on the stage. What suggested itself to him as he sat witnessing the Passion-Play was "the perpetual re-incarnation of the divine story in the history of our own times":—

The first Annas and Caiaphas whom I remember meeting in daily life were Anglican Churchmen who thrust Quakers into jail to extort payment of Church-rates, who barred the doors of the Universities against Nonconformists and then taunted us for our ignorance, and who even at the graveside insisted upon depriving us of the last poor consolation of a parting word of prayer by the grave of our dead. The Sanhedrim was Convocation, and the priests and Pharisees were the Established clergy. . . When Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea got up and left the Sanhedrim rather than share in the bloodguiltiness of those who pressed for the crucifixion of Christ, I was reminded irresistibly of the great struggle of 1875, in which Lord Carnarvon and Lord Derby played the role of Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea, leaving the Cabinet which Lord Beaconsfield then seemed to be hurrying into war as resolutely as Caiaphas pressed forward the Crucifixion. The cause of Ireland is another of those Christs of to-day which were brought vividly before me at Ober-Ammergau. Nathanael, the fierce, bitter, unscrupulous foe of the Nazarene, who went out and suborned false witnesses to come and testify against the accused, was he not the very image of the Times newspaper in a horned hat? It was the Parnell Commission all over again, with half-a-dozen Pigotts all in a row.

But it was not only Christ Himself whom the Passion-Play invested with actuality for Mr. Stead:—

What is equally important, we see His contemporaries as they saw themselves, or as He saw them. Caiaphas—who that has seen Burgomaster Lang in that leading role can feel anything but admiration and sympathy for the worthy Chief of the Sanhedrim?—had everything on his side to justify him. Law, respectability, patriotism, religious expediency, common sense. Against him there was only this poor vagabond from Nazareth—and the Invisible!

Then, if this be so, if Jesus were legally condemned by the Sanhedrim for offences against the Jewish law, it becomes a grave question whether, on the accepted principles of Imperial policy, it was really Pilate's duty to do more than he actually did. The Romans allowed the Jewish nation a considerable measure of home rule. To have absolutely refused to execute a prisoner whom they had tried by their own tribunals, and declared to be guilty, not only of offences which by their law merited death, but of entertaining designs against the Imperial supremacy, would have been a very serious step to take. . . . At any rate, before condemning Pilate, I should like to see how the British Viceroy will act when he is asked to interfere with the first act of flagrant injustice insisted on by the Irish (Home Rule) Administration when Downing-street is occupied by a Ministry that will give anything for an easy life, and when there is no outside public opinion to invoke in favour of the innocent oppressed.

PLAYED OUT OR JUST BEGUN?

Finally, Archdeacon Farrar doubts whether the Passion-Play is not played out. Mr. Stead, on the other hand, thinks that its influence has hardly yet begun. It ought to revolutionize Protestantism and transform the world:—

Protestantism that confines its gaze solely to the sublime central figure of the Gospel story walks with averted face past the beautiful group of the Holy Women. Because others have ignorantly worshipped, therefore we must not even contemplate. But plant Mr. Kensit or Messrs. Morgan and Scott in the theatre of Ober-Ammergau, let them look with dry eyes—if they can—upon the leave-taking at Bethany, and then, as the universal sob rises from thousands of gazers, they will realize, perhaps for the first time, how intense is the passion of sympathy which they have sealed up, how powerful the emotion to which they are forbidden to appeal.

Leaving Ober-Ammergau, I returned by Switzerland to London. At Lucerne, while waiting for the train, I turned over the book in the waiting-room that describes the construction of the Gotthard railway. About one thousand tons of dynamite, it is said, had sufficed when scientifically applied to pierce the tunnels through the mountain barrier that separated Italy from Switzerland. Blasting powder could never have done the work. It helped to level the military roads for the legions of Suwarrow. It needed dynamite to tunnel the St. Gotthard—dynamite directed by science, and as I read this I fell a thinking.

that medieval artistic Christ in magenta and pearl grey, with his disciples in artistic symphonies of harmonious and contrasted colour, no doubt transformed the world. But a new world has risen which sorely needs transforming again. And it is not possible that the conventional Christ, who no doubt did mighty things in His time, may have become as obsolete as bursting powder? May we not hope that if the conventional Christ did so much, the real Christ may do much more?—that the realization of the Christ as he actually lived and died amongst us may be as much superior in its transforming efficacy as the dynamite of the modern engineer is to the powder sack of the old soldiers who marched under Suwarrow?

RECOVERY OF THE OLD ETON FLOGGING BLOCK.

"HIC ET USIQUE" writes to Notes and Queries:—During some disturbance in or about the year 1863, one Lewis (a King's Scholar), when at Eton, abstracted the flogging block, with a view of saving it from destruction. Lewis shortly after obtained a postmastership at Merton College, Oxford, took it with him there, and on his death the block came into possession of his father, Dr. Lewis, in Glamorganshire. This story my brother, Mr. F. T. Bircham, of the Local Government Board, resident at Chepstow, got from Dr. Lewis, and at the same time a promise that the block should be given to my brother to be returned to Eton. Dr. Lewis, however, kept it till his death the other day, when my brother obtained it from Mrs. Lewis, and took it to Eton, giving it over into the possession of the head master on the 3rd of May last. The block was the lower school block, and on it appear carved, among other names, those of Milman, Lonsdale, Roath, Wellesley, and H. Hall, 1773.

THE Leeds Mercury London correspondent understands that Mr. Caine has received communications from upwards of forty Liberal Associations asking him to become their candidate at the next General Election. All these communications proceed on the assumption that Mr. Caine has become a Home Ruler.

SMALL ISLANDS.

A PECULIAR interest, writes the Globe in a cleverly written article apropos of the cession of Heligoland, has at all times attached to small islands. This is easy to understand when they are situated in the widths of the ocean far from land. Then perforce they are as notable on the face of the watery waste as the sparse wells are on the expanse of the Sahara, being similarly welcome as resting-places to the weary traveller. But mere distance and isolation do not account for all the strange fascination belonging to small islands. This might, perhaps, explain the large space which they fill on the page of history, so out of all proportion to their intrinsic importance in area or wealth. It certainly does not explain the romance and poetry which cluster around those spots of earth. Burns has sung:—

"Ask why God made the gem so small,
And why so huge the granite?
Because God means mankind should set
The higher value on it."

And some subtle feeling of this kind may enter into men's regard for little islands. At all events, there is nothing exceptional in two small islands at the present hour forming a kind of pivot on which the negotiations of two mighty Empires turn. Heligoland, with her area of three-fourths of a square mile, and Zanzibar, with hers, of about twice Middlesex, are strictly characteristic in thus possessing a notability common to their class.

In the history of Britain small islands have always taken a most conspicuous part. The little Channel Islands have languages and legislatures of their own, and claim attention as the last remaining portion of the English dominions in France. On the little Scilly Isles, the first grey streaks are seen struggling into the dawn of British history. The Saxon element of the nation's annals makes its start on little Thanet. Little Man has her own language, laws, and parliament; and in Sodor, the title of her bishopric reminds us of the days when the Norsemen ruled, not only the Orkneys, but the Southern isles as well. Tiny Iona, in the very midst of the perilous times when heathen pirates were ruthlessly sweeping the ocean, was fixed on as a centre of missionary effort, and was long the favourite burial-place of the royal and noble personages of all the west and north. Little Lindisfarne, lying no less on the open highway of danger from sea-rovers, was chosen as a centre of Christianisation in Northumbria. Little Rathlin furnished the Bruce a retreat, and, in the story of the often-baffled spider, outshines all local memories of the Scottish war of independence. Ailsa Rock had more power than Ben Nevis to inspire Keats; the Bell Rock has a fine ballad by Southey all to itself; the Bass Rock and Lundy Isle never fail to "draw" excursionists; and St. Kilda is a cynosure to the eyes of the three kingdoms. The cave on diminutive Staffa has a twenty-fold greater attraction from being on an islet. It is not surprising to find that this special regard for the places re-acts on the natives, when there are any, so that the Wight people quite look down on the "overners" of the main land, and the dwellers on the egg-sized Cumbraes, off Glasgow, utter sympathetic prayers for "the adjacent islands of Great Britain and Ireland."

If the view is extended beyond the home country, the same thing fails to be noticed. Everywhere small islands crop up with the same emphasis of self-assertion. Napoleon's great career, from birth to death, is mainly strung on the small island of Corsica and the islets of Elba and St. Helena. The infancy of the British empire in India learnt to walk on the islet of Bombay. Malta has been under the Phœnicians, Greeks, Carthaginians, Romans, the Byzantine Empire, the Arabs, Normans of Sicily, the Emperor Charles V. of Germany, the Knights of St. John, and the French, before becoming English. Could anything but a small island have drunk so full a draught of history? Perim, Labuan, Hong Kong, and other such water-girt specks of land, are the self-conscious stepping-stones of the empire eastwards. The Phœnician cities, Tyre, Anadus, and Cadiz, stood on islets. The little island Ormuz, in the Persian Gulf, loomed as large in the mind's eye of bygone generations as India herself, leading Milton to join "the wealth of Ormuz and of Ind" as a summation of eastern riches. The islands of Zanzibar and Mozambique are far more to the world as yet than any places on the opposite American coast. Juan Fernandez is always before the mind of the world as the lone habitation of Alexander Selkirk, the prototype of "Robinson Crusoe," so dear to the hearts of boys and of all sound-hearted men. Tiny Patmos is sacred, and Salamis can never be forgotten. Ithaca, Ulysses' little island realm, and Phæacia, or Corcyra, now Corfu, with the rich gardens of Alcinus, warm the imaginations of ingenuous youth. From Ferro, one of the Canaries, the ancients reckoned their longitude. In Elephantine, an islet in the Nile at Assouan, and in Philæ, another a little higher up, the Romans placed the outward keys of their Empire, just as they bounded their gaze northwards with Thule, one of the Shetland Isles.

The minds of all boys turn eagerly to distant and detached islands, like Ascension, Pitcairn Island, or Norfolk Island. A similar inclination is to be seen in men, and in the poets it has been allowed a free development. The imagination of all persons, indeed, seems to linger lovingly round sequestered, peaceful isles. Owen Meredith, in his "Love Letter," says:—

"Sweet fellow-sufferer, let us fly!
I know a little isle which doth embower
A home where exiled angels might forbear
Awhile to mourn for Paradise."

Tennyson, in "The Islet," revels in the thought of the newly wedded couple going

"To a sweet little Eden on earth that I know,
A mountain islet pointed and peak'd."

Heine is intoxicated with the thought of a similar gorgeous isle:—

"To that land of youth eternal,
To the Isle of Bimini,
Yearns my spirit, yearn my senses."

This is only a modern expression of the like ancient yearnings embodied in the stories of the mystical Isle Atlantis, far away in the Atlantic Ocean, and in the vague dreams of the Islands of the Blessed in the West, and of a wondrously rich and fragrant island, Panchaia, in the East. This, too, is the meaning of the marvellously seductive islet Meninx or Hotophagitis, in Northern Africa, where grow the ineffably delicious lotus-fruit, which, as soon as tasted, killed in mariners all desire to return to land, wife, or kindred. The subject is most picturesquely treated by the Laureate in the "Lotus-eaters," but the appeal—"Oh, rest ye, brother mariners, we will not wander more!" would hardly be enough to reconcile Englishmen, of the 19th century at least, to lifelong sojourn in the islet of Jerbah, in the Gulf of Kabes, under its modern condition. Something must have fled of the spell which enchained the old-world truants. Out of similar feelings is evolved the shadowy-blue island Hy-Brassil, dim in the distant offing of the Atlantic, towards which the peasants of the west of Ireland strain their looks.

Small islands have been always the roaming grounds of the dreaming fancy. It is, perhaps, not merely a sense of relief that no other nation's guns will hereafter command the entrances to her great river which leads Germany to covet Heligoland. Deep down in the "child's heart within the man's," however unconsciously, there may be another kind of yearning towards the island. England has innumerable islands, many of which, though finer than Heligoland, are unpeopled; Germany has almost none, and this possibly intensifies in her breast the natural human craving for islands. The German heart, like the heart of all the world, may dote upon

"Some enchanted far-off isle
In some tumultuous sea—
Some ocean throbbing far and free
With storms—but where meanwhile
Serenest skies continually
Just o'er that one bright island smile."

Poe has, perhaps, in these lines, worded, as exactly as it can be worded, the island-hunger of mankind.

LIFE AT OXFORD.

IN Harper for July Miss Ethel M. Arnold writes a paper upon "Social Life in Oxford," in which there is a little about the past and a good deal about the present. One noticeable result of the system of Benedict Fellows is (Miss Arnold says) the falling-off of that venerable institution known as "dinner in hall." When the teaching staff of the college for the most part lived on the premises, the high table (at which the dons sit, and so called because it is on a raised dais at the upper end of the hall) was always well filled. Moreover, the world at large has always been led to believe that the scintillations of academic wit in the commonroom gatherings after dinner were brilliant to a degree. But, alas if report speaks rue, that commonroom wit has "all gon away in de Ewigkeit," like Hans Breitmann's "barty." For the married Fellow dines in the bosom of his family in St. Margaret's-road; and if he should think it incumbent on him to appear in hall every now and then, he generally hurries off directly after dinner to his suburban home. The consequence is that in many colleges the high table is almost deserted. The few who still dine there are either the lonely young Fellows, who are only biding their time before they too enter upon a world of butchers' bills and perambulators, or the confirmed old bachelors, who tend naturally to become more and more crusty as their contact with the outer world diminishes.

In the summer term, and particularly the early part of it, Oxford is a city of dreams; effort of any kind is more or less difficult, and one lives on from day to day in a kind of trance, full of vague aspirations, and feeling very far removed from the actualities of life. One falls naturally into a pleasant routine, all the pleasanter for its gentle monotony. The morning passes in reading or writing, and in the afternoon one turns out for a leisurely constitutional, followed by a look in at the Radcliffe Library to browse for an hour on the new books, then home, stopping on one's way to watch the cricket match in the parks for half an hour, lying in Bohemian comfort on the grass. And in the evening to stroll about the quiet roads, listening to the bells, watching the moon rise and the stars come out, drinking in the while the fragrant air, brings peace and dreamless sleep at night.

The following story is told of Dr. Franck Bright, Master of University College: The college had done well one year in the annual spring boat-races, and the crew, elated by their success, indulged themselves by giving an unusually uproarious bump-supper at the conclusion of their exertions. The next morning one of their number had occasion to present himself in the Master's study to give him an essay. The Master was sitting at his writing-table, evidently absorbed in business. Presently he looked up, to see the young man standing at his elbow, essay in hand. "So-and-so," said the Master (he stutters a little), "you were all d-d-drunk last night." "No, sir! upon my word, sir!" remonstrated the young man, full of righteous indignation. "Th-th-then there's no excuse for you," said the Master, and went on with his writing.

OF BED-MAKERS.

THERE has lately been mooted at Cambridge, writes a home paper, a proposal to substitute men for women as bed-makers in the colleges; a retrograde movement that cannot be too strongly condemned—by those who know nothing whatever about it. Doubtless, in the future, when women have assumed that position in the University which their commanding successes have indisputably and irrevocably won for them and from which they are only excluded by the brutal callousness and selfish stupidity of the so-called stronger sex—when this happens, as happen it will sooner or later, then, perhaps, we shall be able to look for something higher and better, something more really true and more truly real (vide undergraduate papers passim). But at present the identification of women's rights with bed-maker's "perks" seems to be not quite secure.

Mr. Hilton, in the Light Green, defined a bedmaker as "a necessary evil," and a "gyp" as "more evil and less necessary;" while not long ago no less a person than Mr. Punch himself deigned to measure swords with his young friends at Cambridge, and, in answer to a clever, if somewhat laboured definition which appeared in the Granta, the undergraduate paper of to-day, produced the following matchless and Euclidean definition—"A bed-maker lies evenly upon any point." Admirable, however, as these and many other definitions are, they all have the same failing that they are not adequate. A bed-maker, as a rule, both in bodily proportions, and in multiplicity of characteristics, is too large to be expressed in a single sentence. She must be described and not defined.

Historically she is of but recent growth. Her work was originally undertaken by certain poor students entitled Sizars, who valorously resented any encroachment on their peculiar rights. Anybody who cares to take the trouble may read for himself in the statues of the University of Cambridge how in 1625, the united wisdom of the Vice-Chancellor and eleven heads of colleges decreed a decree, reciting that "contrary to ancient statutes . . . within a few years boys and men ignorant of letters and altogether unapt to make any progress in the studies of the University, and women besides, had crept within the college walls to do those works which used to be done by indigent students to help to bear their charges, from whence great damage had accrued to the University at home and obloquy abroad." It was therefore decreed that "for the future no woman of whatever age or condition dare to make any one's bed in private chambers, or to go to any scholar's chamber except as nurse." Further it was enacted that "nurses and laundresses were to be of mature age and good fame, wives or widows of good repute," and that "if it was necessary to cleanse, any college alms women over fifty years of age were to be used." The penalty for contumacy was set at banishment from Cambridge and all towns within four miles of it.

Nor was she always she. Sir Isaac Newton's bedmaker was a man, John Perkins by name, and a skilled astrologer, to whom the following verses were addressed by Vincent Bourne, of Trinity College, probably the most polished versifier of his day:—

Ad Johannem Perkins
Astrologum Cantabrigiensem

Cum musis musae famulantur, et artibus artes,
Majori (ut fas est) obsequiosa minor;
Nec melior lex est nec convenientior aequo,
Quam siet astronomo servus ut astrologus.

Again, in 1721, we find a Latin epitaph on Rossacus, a man bed-maker, who was drowned in the Cam. The last notice that we have of the race of men bed-makers is by a writer in the Gentleman's Magazine of 1803, who speaks of a bed-maker as a fellow. We might almost be tempted to believe that the writer in question had confused bed-makers with gyps, were it not for the fact that the Gradus ad Cantabrigiam, which appeared in the same year, under the headihg "Bed-makers," says, "This office is not confined to sex."

From this it appears that the change to the present system of female bed-makers has been gradual, but it has been complete. Nor is it likely that the old state of affairs will be reverted to unless the reformers of to-day adopt the vigorous policy of Dr. Conybear, of Christ Church, in Oxford, who, in 1733, bundled women bed-makers neck and crop out of his college, but whether with compensation or not we do not learn. Such a measure, however, is impossible in these more enlightened times, and undergraduate opinion would revolt against such unknightly behaviour. It would refuse, it does refuse, to be robbed of what has so long been the butt of its wit. Uncomplimentary as have been its allusions to bedmakers in the past, now that they are on their trial it rallies round them, and finds in them much that it would not willingly lose. Whether in this matter it is not more selfish than kind remains a question, but on one point there can be no doubt, and this is that bed-makers are neither so black nor so old as they have generally been painted. For to say that bed-makers are not always clean, not always honest, is but to say that human nature is human nature: to pretend, on the other hand, that they are always as careful as they might be of your china and that your whisky never disappears, would be to ignor the existence of the college cat: to complain that they are never handy when you want them, that your kettle never boils, that your room is never swept, is natural, perhaps, but hyperoritical when one considers what a curse a tidy bed-maker who arranges all one's papers for one is. But we may be said of them this much is certain, that there was no man ever up at the 'Varsity who was not heartily afraid of his bedmaker. As receptacles of college tradition, bedmakers are useful, and many a good story of the college life of some great man has been preserved by them. Like the Jews of old quorum fanum cophnusque supplex, they always bring with them to their work in the morning a basket—empty. In the evening when they return is full—of perquisites. Bed-makers, like policemen and other public bodies, do not rise above the public opinion of the district in which they are placed. If a college or a staircase is rowdy, the bed-maker expects her young gentlemen to be rowdy too; if it is quiet, she expects them to be quiet.

But the most interesting development of bedmakers is one that has escaped notice hitherto, namely, the strict rules of etiquette by which their society is governed. There are three grades, "bed-makers," "helps," and "women." The lines of demarcation are fixed and unchangeable. Great as is the gulf between a bedmaker and her help, not less great is the gulf between a help and a woman, by which contemptuous term is expressed one who is called in to render occasional assistance. A bed-maker is "ma'am," a help is "missus;" but a woman is bluntly "she;" and if "she" ventures to address as tray remark to the bed-maker, some such conversation as this may be heard between that august body and her help, with whom she condescends to be on speaking terms, always provided that due respect is preserved: "When hi fust cum into college, Mrs. Sammins, that was five nor twenty years ago, hi halways beaved as became my place." "Yes, ma'am," replies the help; "nor you can't say as 'ow hi never beaves disrespexful. Hi knows my place, hi does, but they himperent' ussis wot san't been in college, no not seven years, nor yet five, they gives themselves as much hairs as there's no 'olding 'em." But hi knows my place, ma'am hi does. Hime thankful to say." Then follows a long discourse and the degeneracy of the times carried on in a high key, every word of which "she," who is sweeping the stairs up above is meant to hear, and does hear. Many are bickerings and heart-burnings caused by this same ridiculous etiquette. "But lor' bless you, sir," as one of them remarked on by the other day, "what's the good of livin' if you haven't got some one to look down upon?" A remark which, taking the world as it is, is unfortunately only too true.

COFFEE INEBRIETY.

THE "cup which cheers" has been so long believed to be the most fitting substitute for the one which "inebriates," that it is a little alarming to find that Dr. Mendel, of Berlin, has come to a contrary conclusion. So far (says a writer in the Standard) from believing that twopence off the pound of tea or coffee, will reduce the "drink bill," the Parliaments of this eminent physiologist go far to prove that, by permitting the poorer classes to buy more of these stimulants, the cheapness will conduce to the spread of what he has described as "coffee inebriety"—a form of intoxication which very frequently leads to the more alarming, but not actually more dangerous, form produced by alcohol. The studies upon which he founds these conclusions were made in all parts of Germany, but more particularly upon women of the working population in and about the great gun factories of Essen. Here wages are high and employment constant so that the mechanics' wives have no difficulty in buying as much of their favourite stimulant as they desire. This takes the shape of coffee. The quantities many of them consume are enormous. Large numbers of women use on an average one pound per week, and some of the men drink considerably more, besides supplementing it at odd times with beer and wine. The result is a widespread form of neurosis, to which Dr. Mendel has ventured to apply the name of "inebriety." It is a true form of it, approaching in some kind and degree to delirium tremens, for the whole nervous system is deranged, if not utterly ruined. To the gaiety produced by indulgence a profound depression of spirits succeeds, coupled with frequent headaches and a sleeplessness which in time assumes the character of an almost incurable insomnia—a distressing complaint in itself, and naturally the advance guard of a host of other evils. For a brief space, it is relieved by another strong dose of coffee. But as soon as the effects of this die away the symptoms return with increased vehemence. The muscles become weak and trembling, and the hands shake when at rest in a manner resembling the semi-paralysis of a confirmed drunkard whose nervous system has been shattered to its centre. An increasing aversion to labour and any steady work is noticed. The heart's action becomes rapid and irregular, and palpitation, with a heavy feeling in the precordial region, makes its appearance. Last of all comes dyspepsia of the most persistent character and of an extreme nervous type, rendering the life of the coffee-tippler a burden to himself and to all around him. In many cases acute nausea is common, showing that the skin, and the entire system of which it forms so important a part, have been poisoned, and, as in the case of alcoholism, are incapable of performing the functions proper to them. In the course of his studies Dr. Mendel found very few instances in which the confirmed coffee drunkard was ever cured.

MME. PANITZA has written to some of the diplomatic agents to complain that her husband was loaded with chains after the confirmation of his sentence by the Court of Appeal, and that three days before his execution he was so fastened to a wall in an underground cellar that he had to remain for thirty-six hours in a standing posture.

HOW A MOSAIC IS MADE.

"At the Flint Glass-House in White Fryars, near the Temple, are made and sold by Wholesale and Retale all sorts of Decanthers, Drinking Glasses, Cruewitts, &c." So ran the advertisement in the Tatler in 1710, and these remarkable works have been in active existence from the time of the Great Fire to the present day. Many other kinds of glass than that produced from flint are made there now, for there is scarcely an art of craft connected with the manufacture of glass, from a wine-glass or a thermometer tube to a cathedral window, that Messrs. Powell do not practise. One of the most important recent developments of the firm has been in the art of working in glass mosaic; and they have recently reproduced in this method Mr. Holman Hunt's picture of "Christ among the Doctors," which many people may remember in the old Water-colour Society's Exhibition of 1887. The mosaic, about 8 ft. wide and 4 ft. high, was made for the reredos of Clifton College Chapel. Few people have the slightest idea of how a mosaic is made, or of how the little bits of coloured glass are arranged so as to produce a picture. To glean a few particulars, therefore, for the public, a press representative called at the works the other day. He had an hour's talk with Mr. James Powell, and was shown the whole process.

HOW THE GLASS IS MADE.

"And how are the cubes of glass made and arranged into a picture?"—"You must begin at the beginning, and see the glass made," said Mr. Powell, leading the way into the workshop. "But first let me show you what the old method was. This," showing me a piece of opaque coloured glass, for all the world like a biscuit, "is a piece of glass such as is used in Venice. It is made by taking a big drop of molten glass and pressing it out flat—to about a quarter of an inch in thickness. These are made in every colour. They are cut into little cubes and arranged to form the design, and it is the cut face which forms the picture surface. The disadvantages are the disagreeable glitter of the glass and the difficulty of shaping the pieces." "And the new method?" I was shown the maker of the glass at work. The workman has a shallow mould into which he sifts from the perforated bottom of a tin jug a coloured powder. From another jug he sifts another thickness of white powder, and then a considerable thickness of coarser powder, making altogether about a quarter of an inch. These powders are of ground glass and are fused by the heat of the fire into a solid tile. The first powder is of the colour the glass is intended to be, the second is white, to give quality to the surface colour and to resist damp, and the third is simply a backing of coarser glass to give strength and thickness. The tile is then cut up into little pieces with a steel American wheel into the shapes required. "The advantages," continued Mr. Powell, "besides the superior colour, is that we use the surface instead of the cut edge of the tile for the picture. And so we can cut any shape we require. Thus, as in Mr. Holman Hunt's picture, we can cut pieces into the shape of a thumbnail, or of a nostril, or of the parts of an eye, or any of the little bits of drawing which go to make up a picture. In the old way, these things would have had to be made up of little cubes, and of course the shapes would not have been nearly so accurate. By our method we are enabled to approach much nearer to pictorial effect—quite as near as is desirable in this class of decoration."

HOW THE PIECES ARE PUT TOGETHER.

"And the putting of the pieces together?"—"There are several ways. The most obvious is to cement the glass piece by piece upon the stone work. But that makes very uneven work, and it is difficult to make alterations. The methods we actually practise are two—namely, 'face down' and 'face up.' The former is used for decorative panels and the latter for important work like pictures. The method is this. We have a tracing made of, say, a head, which tracing is pasted down on a plate of glass. The little pieces of mosaic are then, after much careful selection and cutting, put down upon their places on the tracing and fixed with weakcement; and so, bit by bit, the whole is made up. The advantage is that we see what we are doing as we go on, and that alterations are easily made. When the work is finished in this way it is ready for transferring permanently to the stone wall or to a slab of slate. This is easily done. We take a piece of linen, such as our architects use for tracing, and cement it all over the face of the pieces of glass. When this is hard the linen with all the pieces of mosaic are stripped off the glass plate. The slab of slate or the wall is then prepared with cement, upon which the mosaic, held together by the linen, is pressed, and left to harden. The linen is then washed off and the finished mosaic exposed to view. And this is how a glass mosaic is made."

THE BLACK FOREST A PEDESTRIAN PARADISE.

MR. HENRY W. WOLFF, in his "Rambles in the Black Forest" (Longmans), has put together a charming account of a little known region. He thinks that, as a district to visit—

The Black Forest has much to recommend it. He knows of no country which at first sight strikes the visitor more pleasingly or "grows upon him" more—as the saying is—on longer acquaintance. There are few districts within such easy reach in which one may so combine the delights of fine scenery with forgetfulness of home—be so freely alone with Nature in all its beauty—so little under restraint. Its mountains must, of course, not be measured against the Alps. But then, size is not the only standard of beauty. There are violets as well as dahlias, alike in landscape and garden. There are ambling nags of pedestrianism as well as dradging pack-horses. Now for these the Black Forest is the country of all countries. It has rightly been dubbed the "paradise of pedestrians." Time was, when it was indeed accessible to none but pedestrians who were men enough to climb their mountain as a matter of course, and trust to walking as their main means of locomotion. Those were the days when the Rhenish florin (somewhere about eighteen-pence) would find the traveller in night's lodging breakfast, dinner, and supper (including capital trout) for twenty-four hours together, and evenings leave a balance over. But times has changed all that. You may walk now—and walking always best in the Forest. You can walk from end to end, ninety miles one way and over forty another, climbing over mountain tops or keeping in the valleys, measuring your exercise exactly to your taste—walking when you like, stopping when you like—making sure that everywhere you will find clean quarters and decent food—and all amid scenery of unquestionable beauty—beauty richly varied, but always beautiful. But you need not depend upon your legs as a matter of necessity. Railways have been built, roads have been made.

In the same volume is the following paragraph:—Surviving superstition, I am afraid, makes the Black Forest a poor district for doctors. The vis medicatrix mainly relied upon—at any rate, in Roman Catholic parts, for the Lutherans are more sceptical—is the power of "sympathy." "Whatever go wrong in man, woman, or beast, the sympathy doctor" is by preference called in. If a beast be ill, the sympathy doctor is advised, and on the ensuing nights the stable-door is left open. For the doctor must come by stealth—on a lucky night, in which he meets no one on the way. The watch-dog is purposely chained up, so that he can do nothing but bark, of which nobody takes notice The "doctor" speaks his formulas—which are always highly religious, and end with an invocation of the Trinity—and when he has done, he makes his presence known somehow, and is called in for a glass of kirschwasser and a meal, as well as his little fee. Whenever anything goes wrong between lovers, a "sympathy doctor" is sure to have a call made upon his skill.

CAPRI AND ITS CAVERNS.

ONE who has lived two years in Capri contributes an interesting article to Cornhill for July. The writer deplores the conversion of the island into a fashionable seaside resort, but makes up his mind to the inevitable.

There are numberless caverns in Capri, but, of course, the "Blue Grotto" is the chief. Most of my readers have doubtless seen pictures of it; but I have never seen any reproduction that does it complete justice, and it is doubtful if any ever will, for it is the marvellous light that produces an effect which evades the painter's subtlest efforts at imitation. It is useless wasting words in trying to give a faint idea of its perfection. If you can visit it yourself—not, however, when the crowded steamer that conveys passengers from Naples to Capri discharges boat-loads of fashionable tourists into its quiet precincts, and the air is filled with the shouts of boatmen and the screams of frightened women as the boats pass through the small opening. Go alone—on such one or two congenial spirits who will not annoy you by talking when you wish to be quiet and enjoy—on a calm, very clear morning in summer at about 11 a. m. Remain in the grotto at least half an hour, and if you do not come away with a heart full of reverent thankfulness to God for the marvellous beauties which He has permitted you to behold—I am sorry for you. An American millionaire once made a bid for the "Blue Grotto," but his offer was refused. All the other grottos on the island I can only speak of the most important, such as the "Green" and "Red" Grottos, which almost touch each other. On a hot day it is pleasant to undress on the little shelving beach in the "Red Grotto," and to swim from there into the "Green," the entrances to which are quite large. The "White Grotto," under the Tiberio Rock, is remarkable for a large fresh-water lake in its centre. They are all round the coast-line, grottos large and small, and into some of these the sea rushes with a sound like a pistol-shot.

THE Rev. Charles Gore, M. A., master of the Pusey House at Oxford and the newly-appointed Bampton lecturer for the coming year, who has become a celebrity through his essay on "Inspiration in Lux Mundi," preaching to a crowded congregation in Westminster Abbey, writes the Christian Leader, said there was profound honesty in Carlyle's protest against the vain use of Christian language when belief in Christian verities has passed away. When one tried to comfort Carlyle after his wife's death by repeating the words of our Lord, "In my Father's house are many mansions,"—"Yes," he said, "if you were God, you had a right to say that; but if you were a man, what do you know more than the rest of us?" Christ has turned an uncertain hope into an assurance, but He has done this only because he was the eternal Son of God, and because as Son of Man He was raised from the dead. We may be thankful that one like John Stuart Mill confessed that there was no better rule of virtue than to do as Christ would have done; but logically this is only possible if we believe that by this man God will judge the world.

THE COMPLEXION AND THE CHARACTER.

I ONCE knew an Englishman (says Mrs. Frank Leslie) of sound opinions in most matters who declared that all the wickedness of the world emanated from blonde women. He said that so soon as he saw golden tresses and a milk-and-rose complexion he began to guard himself as he would in presence of a lovely serpent. Women of this colouring he declared were always cruel, treacherous, cold-hearted, and mischief-making. In fact, he could not say enough against them, and I always suspected he had had some bitter blonde experience that had wrapped his judgment. Then another friend of mine used to aver that the blondes of the corps de ballet bleached their locks and assumed the pearly complexion peculiar to that style because the father of all mischief liked to thus burlesque the livery of heaven.

"Then you grant that it is the livery of Heaven?" suggested I on one occasion, and other persons being present, a free and pretty heated discussion arose, in which one side claimed that no artist, no poet, no ecstatic religieuse had ever imagined a brown angel. "They always have fluffy golden hair taken off their foreheads by the wind, mild blue eyes and fair skies," remarked a High Church young lady, who probably had done more angelic art-study and literature than any of us.

"Did you ever see one?" inquired the blonde-later.
"No, but—"
"Did you ever see any one that had seen one?"
"No, but—"
"Excuse me, but have you any idea that Raphael or Fra Angelico or any of the angel portrait painters ever had an angelic model?"
"Many of the saints have seen them," calmly replied the young lady, and a mocking voice at my elbow remarked:—
"At least one can hardly fancy Satan a blonde."
"Oh, I can," exclaimed another. "In fact, my idea of Mephistopheles has always been a colourless haggard complexion, red hair, and very pale-grey eyes, with red lights in them, and the thin, dry sort of figure that goes with that complexion."

And so the ball was tossed from one to another, and on the whole the blondes had a hard time of it. It seems to me that the whole world is just as much at variance on this point as these friends of mine. Certainly, as we consider the famous beauties and the famous rulers of men among women, we find the vote of history a nearly and evenly balanced one.

But, of course, the true question is, what temperament goes with blonde or brunette colouring? My own experience is that the dark-skinned, dark-eyed, rather stately women of my acquaintance are the most easily understood, most easily managed and pr

DUNKLEY'S NEW SUSPENSION PERAMBUCOT

[PATENTED JULY, 1888.]

PRONOUNCED BY EMINENT MEDICAL MEN AS BEING
The EASIEST CARRIAGE in the WORLD!

THIS drawing only conveys in a faint degree the important and valuable advantage of this machine. It is gracefully suspended on four coiled springs from the sides of the body to the extended handles. Consequently when the Carriage is passing over kerbstones or any rough surface of the least kind, the springs are at once brought into play, and a gentle swinging up-and-down motion occurs. By this motion the most delicate infant receives the easiest form of nursing and riding combined which the mind can possibly conceive.

The Carriage is also fitted with an entirely new patent canopy, which can be adjusted to any angle. By a simple arrangement it can be placed at either side or either end.

THE WORLD'S BEST LEMON SQUEEZER

Is to the old-fashioned article what the Railway is to the Dak Gharry.

No bitter from the rind, as it acts on the pulp only. Made of glass it is kept clean as easily as a tumbler. Almost instantaneous in action, a child can use it without soiling the hands.

TO USE THE MODERN LEMON JUICE EXTRACTOR—
Set it upon a tumbler as shown in sketch, cut the lemon in half, place the half lemon upon the points and press downwards, slightly twisting it. The ribs easily enter the pulp, and the juice pours down through the openings into the tumbler. The openings are so small that the pips cannot pass.
Once tried it will supersede all old-fashioned appliances. Over a million sold already. Patented in India and all leading countries. It is to be had at most Stores in India. Should you be unable to obtain one, the Proprietor will send one post free to any part of India on receipt of 2s., or 6 for 10/4.

CHASSAING'S WINE
Bi-Digestive
with Pepsine & Diastase
for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Vomiting, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Consumption, Gastralgia, Loss of Appetite, Constipation.

This preparation of wine is founded upon sound chemical and physiological principles. While pepsine is the natural solvent or digestive for nitrogenous aliments, it has little or no effect upon the farinous constituents which enter so largely into the composition of the food of man; and there is no doubt that some of the disorders of digestion arise from their assimilation of the starchy elements. Now the proper digestive for these is diastase; and in the bi-digestive wine, of M. Chassaing, these two most important principles, pepsine and diastase, are combined in suitable proportions. — See THE LANCET, July 27 th. 1872.

A Health-giving, Refreshing, Cooling, Sparkling, and Invigorating Summer Beverage, or for any Season, and a Gentle Laxative and Tonic in the various forms of Indigestion.

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT"

Invaluable to Residents in HOT COUNTRIES.

Is the best Preventive and Cure for

Biliousness.	Sick Headache.
Mental Depression.	Want of Appetite.
Skin Eruptions.	Pimples on the Face.
Constipation.	Vomiting.
Giddiness.	Feverishness.
Thirst, &c.	Unnatural Excitement.
Impure Blood.	Errors in Diet.

Instead of being lowering to the system, ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" is in the highest degree Invigorating, and does not cake or get hard in warm and humid Climates.

A SPARKLING AND REFRESHING DRAUGHT.—Notwithstanding its medicinal value, the "FRUIT SALT" must be looked upon as essential as breathing fresh air, or as a simple and safe beverage under ALL CIRCUMSTANCES, and may be taken as a sparkling and refreshing draught in the same way as Lemonade, Soda Water, Potass Water, &c., only it is much cheaper and BETTER, IN EVERY SENSE OF THE TERM, TO AN UNLIMITED EXTENT.

PRESERVING AND RESTORING HEALTH.—ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" acts as simply, yet just as powerfully, on the animal system as sunshine does on the vegetable world. It has a natural action on the organs of digestion, absorption, circulation, respiration, secretion, and excretion, and removes all impurities (by natural means) the unnatural and dangerous accumulation of fat. It keeps the body in healthy trim, by preserving and restoring health.

TO PARENTS.—This preparation is invaluable in the nursery as a gentle laxative; it is pleasant to the taste, and much superior to senna or other nauseous drugs; it corrects the ill effects of over-eating or exhaustion, it is extremely beneficial in any feverishness or heat of the skin. The bowels ought to be kept free by the "FRUIT SALT" for a month or six weeks after eruptive diseases, as Measles, Scarlet Fever, Chicken-pox, Small-pox, and all Fevers or Infectious Diseases, &c.; for its use frees the system of the "dregs." Many disastrous results would be avoided by attending to this.

HOT COUNTRIES.—ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, &c.—"I have personally used ENO'S 'FRUIT' SALT, and know it not alone to be excellent, but really invaluable. Especially must this be the case in the hot countries of the East, where Acidity of the Stomach, Biliousness, and Fevers are so common."—J. M. PHEBLES, M.D., Author of Around the World, Travels in Polynesia, China, India, Arabia, Egypt, &c., &c.

CAUTION.—Legal Rights are protected in every civilised country. Examine each bottle and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a WORTHLESS IMITATION. Sold by all Chemists, &c. Prepared only at

LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL

THE PUREST. THE MOST PALATABLE. THE MOST DIGESTIBLE. THE MOST EFFICACIOUS.

Incontestably proved by Thirty Years' Medical Experience to be

The only Cod Liver Oil which produces the full curative effects in CONSUMPTION AND DISEASES OF THE CHEST, THROAT AFFECTIONS, GENERAL DEBILITY, DISEASES OF THE SKIN, WASTING DISEASES OF CHILDREN, RICKETS, AND ALL SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

SELECT MEDICAL OPINIONS.

DR. PROSSER JAMES,

Lecturer on Materia Medica, London Hospital.

"Dr. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL contains the whole of the active ingredients of the remedy, and is easily digested. Hence its value, not only in Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, but in a great number of cases to which the Profession is extending its use."

DR. HUNTER SEMPLE,

Physician to the Hospital for Diseases of the Throat and Chest, London.

"I have long been aware of the great reputation enjoyed by the LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL introduced into medical practice by Dr. DE JONGH, and have recommended it with the utmost confidence. I have no hesitation in stating my opinion that it possesses all the qualities of a good and efficient medicine. Its taste is by no means disagreeable, and might even be called pleasant. I have found Dr. DE JONGH'S OIL very useful in cases of Chronic Cough, and especially in Laryngeal Disease complicated with Consumption."

DR. SAUNDERS, C.B.,

Late Deputy-Inspector-General Army Hospitals, Superintendent London Medical Mission.

"I have used Dr. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL extensively among the sick poor of St. Giles's, and consider it a valuable remedy, especially in the Wasting Diseases of Children."

DR. WHITMORE,

Medical Officer of Health, St. Marylebone, London.

"My own somewhat lengthened experience as a Medical Practitioner enables me with confidence to recommend Dr. DE JONGH'S LIGHT BROWN COD LIVER OIL as being more uniform in quality, more certain in its effects, more palatable, and infinitely less likely to disagree with the stomach than the Pale Oil. If I were asked for an explanation of the marked success which for so many years has attended the administration of Dr. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL, I should say that it is owing to its extraordinary medicinal, dietetic, and regiminal properties, and which are found to exist in no other medicine that I am acquainted with, in such uniform combination."

Dr. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL is supplied ONLY in IMPERIAL Half-Pints, Pints and Quarts, sealed with BETTS' Patent Capsule impressed on the top with Dr. DE JONGH'S Stamp, and on the side with his Signature, and the Signature of ANSAR, HARFORD & Co.; and bearing under the wrapper a Label with the same Stamp and Signatures.

WITHOUT THESE MARKS NONE CAN POSSIBLY BE GENUINE.

Sold by all respectable Chemists, Druggists, and Storekeepers throughout the World.

LEVER WATCHES FOR INDIA.

THE construction of most Lever Watches have in the past few years degenerated into toy's making. This is generally the case with watches intended for the Trade, especially the bazar Trade. Tricks of the most shameful description takes the place of honest watch-making, and still every Dealer or Agent will guarantee his articles to be best, in order to procure a quick sale, only to the detriment of respectable Manufacturers and the Public.—We would caution against actual deceiving appearance in Watches and such counterfeits as fancy jewels, delicate mechanisms, unscientific principles of wheel-works, and Lever Adjustments.

☞ Ask Dealers to guarantee, on special warranty paper, and in full, that you get real ruby jewels in the Watch you buy, and see how many can do it.

Genuine Watches with Trade Marks or Trade Name are obtainable at Manufacturers' own prices from G. A. Charpie and Co., Bombay and Calcutta, whose Catalogue of 84 different kind of Watches, for every purse and fancy, is sent free on application.

Household Lever Time-pieces.—We have secured the Sole Agency of the best American Clock Factory for the manufacture of 4 and 2 inches round Lever Time-pieces, with or without Alarums, Plain or Automatic figure dials (coloured). These articles have no equal in the market; every one of them has a special Trade Mark on dial or at back, as an additional guarantee of good manufacture.

☞ No other Firm in the whole of India offer advantages and goods of real merit at prices intended to procure a large sale. See our new Watch, No. 36 or 38.

Rowland's Macassar Oil

Has been known for 100 years as the best preserver and beautifier of the hair: it prevents it falling off or turning grey, strengthens weak hair, and eradicates scurf and dandruff; it is unsurpassed as a brilliantine for the beard and moustaches, to which it imparts a soft and silky appearance; it is also sold in a golden colour for fair-haired children.

Rowland's Kalydor

A soothing and emollient milk for the face, and is most cooling to the skin in hot climates; it removes freckles, tan, sunburn, roughness and redness of the skin, pimples, cutaneous eruptions, &c., and produces soft fair skin, and a lovely delicate complexion.

ROWLAND'S ESSENCE OF TYRE, a harmless preparation for dyeing red or grey hair a permanent brown or black. Ask chemists and druggists for Rowland's articles, of 20, Hatton Garden, London, England, and avoid worthless and injurious imitations.

NATURE'S REMEDY FOR CONSTIPATION.

PLEASANT TO TAKE. CERTAIN IN ITS ACTION.

WITHOUT A RIVAL FOR CONSTIPATION.

Opinions of the Medical Press.—"We have found it more than usually successful in cases of Chronic Constipation, and have found them to effect their purpose most satisfactorily."—The Lancet, Oct. 27th, 1888.

THE NEW FRUIT

ACTS on the LIVER.

Not only acts on the bowels, but the charm of its action is that from its invaluable great tonic properties, it at once gives tone and energy to the whole system, and thus enables the organs to restore its long lost power. The New Fruit Stimulates the Liver, creating a natural secretion of the bile.

Such diseases as Biliousness, Sick Headache, Congestion of the Stomach, Dizziness, Flatulence, Piles, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Nervousness, Neuralgia, &c., are well known to emanate from Constipation.
